JadenStriker You have to know how to use the tools, which will take time to learn, in which case, you educate your self, and you will need the equipment to do it. Granted most computers now days can do what you want, but at what quality level are you planing to do that at? You maybe able to do something similer to Red vs. Blue, but even then, they had an inspired group of individuals who had the equipment and knolgede to pull it off, as well as the time and money to do it, and in more likely then not, they have had invested some money in schooling of some sort, wether it is at a school or college, or just buying a cuple computer books at Hastings or Barns and Noble to self teach it.

So don't give me any BS about you don't need an edjucation, because it is not limited to only a class room meaning you can self teach your self.

Dude, perhaps you should educate yourself on how to spell "educate" and "knowledge" before you go rambling on about how video editing requires an education.
