Got to agree with ^ on the idea of somekind of installation pop-up, I've seen a couple of servers with the welcome message "Please go to <http://www.renguard.com...>" or words to that effect, you do seem to get less people joining and being kicked by renguard half a dozen times (seriously, by the second time you'd think that they'd realise something was up) on these servers.

There may be some use to de-activating RenGuard on a couple of the n00bsvrs, that way you get non-RenGuard users on and when the svrs go back to RenGuard the users have to install RenGuard to go on the servers, as it stands many people have simply moved to non-RenGuard servers that aren't switching so there is simply no-incentive to install RenGuard.

I'm not entirely to sure how well I just made my points as I'm still recovering from last night so you'll just have to bear with me if my post takes a couple of re-reads.
