
Subject: Saving Credits! and destroying a Medium Tank
Posted by KIRBY098 on Wed, 12 May 2004 20:02:40 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Negative.

Referencing another academic's work in their specialized field is not lazy. It takes true wisdom to realize there are others far more intelligent than oneself, and bow to their superior knowledge in that arena. One must develop a prudent, and relevant theory based on certifiable and public knowledge bases. Not one's best guess based on what they think they have fully researched.

That being said: Yes, there is great merit in finding things out for oneself, yet the true wise man is the one who knows he is a fool. When debating I routinely reference scientific and political quotes, and data bases. I refute the idea that that somehow makes me an ignorami because I draw from those sources.

Decadence in our society is attributable to a great many things, but laziness is not the root. It's an effect, not a cause.
