Umbral_DelaFlareRemember, don't act like you are the top shit your freshman year. You may have been high and mighty in the 8th grade, but you are beginning from scratch now.

Not true! Well for the most part it is. Tread lightly like he said, but if anyone tries to pick on you (two seniors did when I was a freshman) then give it right back to them. I bonked one off a glass case (too bad it didnt break or else I wouldve had a lot of fame freshman year) and the other I just threw to the ground.....then this really really really big like 300 lb 6 foot something kid came and grabbed me, and then my brother broke it up, since I assume he was friends with him. I wouldve gotten my ass kicked by that dude more then likely, but I had my connections up top(brother!)

Anyways, dont do anything stupid. Dont get into trouble, cuz itll catch up to you know matter what you do in life, so if you want to smoke weed or get arrested for underage drinking, do it, but when a company/military runs a security background check on you for clearence, dont expect to get your job. Heck, if your dumb enough to do it, I hope you dont get your job. <--trying to instill the truth in yah bro., dont mess up.

Also, just do your work, and be respectfull. I dont know how many times ive gotten into arguments with punks who disrespected the teacher, including subs. Big crap, they may think your a suckup or w/e, but my sister is a teacher, and I know if anyone treated her like that id stick my m-16 down their throat. Remember, thats someones mother, sister, brother, father, treat them like you and your family would like to be treated.

Stand up for what you believe in, dont let teachers push you around. Ive seen it happen, and Ive seen it delt with accordingly.

Most important, think ahead. Like I did. I knew I wanted military when I was a freshman. Why? Because of law enforcement. The military opens up doors you cannot even believe, and especialyl when it comes to law enforcement, with the combination of college, youll go far! Just a little idea for you.

Anyways, dont sweat it. If you keep your head on straight, your ass out of shit, and your respect in line, youll do just great.
