Have you ever woken up one morning and felt that things would never be the same they had been the day before? I woke up yesterday morning and felt sad. I felt saddened by the actions of so few affecting so many. I was disturbed by the lack of values that those responsible displayed by means of their actions. I felt betrayed because of the evil in our midst.

I fail to understand why xptec felt it to be ok to bring lies and deceit into the Renegade community. Whether I personally value BC or not, BC deserves my respect, my respect for their immense contributions to the Renegade community, just like Crimson and those around her. I have read many voices on the topic and heard their excuses: "BC did this, BC did that ..." "They deserved it ..."

All these excuses don't matter.

What matters is that I know what is right, and I know what is wrong. And if I am not sure, I look myself into my eyes and listen to my heart to find the truth. I hope that I will never dishonor myself the way xptec did when he chose his path.
