
Subject: Michael Moore Has Competition.

Posted by Nodbugger on Mon, 14 Jun 2004 06:52:14 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

JavaxcxNodbugger

<http://ap.tbo.com/ap/breaking/MGB3C459AVD.html>

http://www.worldtribune.com/worldtribune/breaking_1.html

I've said it before, and I'll say it again:

WARNING: SCRAP METAL ALERT.

One site says Saddam COULD have shipped out WMD components, the other says he did for certain. Since the latter hasn't shown any conclusive proof outside saying:

"The United Nations has determined that Saddam Hussein shipped weapons of mass destruction components as well as medium-range ballistic missiles before, during and after the U.S.-led war against Iraq in 2003."

and

"The briefing contained satellite photographs that demonstrated the speed with which Saddam dismantled his missile and WMD sites before and during the war."

I could very easily spam this kind of information online to justify my war, too. I don't know if the World Tribune is Republican or not, but if it is, I'm not surprised.

The former site says:

"UNITED NATIONS (AP) - U.N. weapons experts have found 20 engines used in banned Iraqi missiles in a Jordan scrapyards along with other equipment which could be used to make weapons of mass destruction, an official said Wednesday."

If they're going to pull the hypothetical card, I'm going to say that he might NOT have made weapons of mass destruction too.

Please note that I'm not condoning Saddam Hussien. I'm approaching this war extremely objectively.

You are not approaching it objectively. If you were you would say..."Saddam is dirty bad motherfucker who needs his ass kicked."

Oh, and the ' could'. He is not going to make toasters with these parts. What the fuck do you think he will do with rocket engines and metal peices that were used in missiles?

If you took apart a minute man ICBM and threw it in the back of a truck not many people would know what it was. So a hunk of metal scraps can end up as a dangerous weapon.
