liberatorThat's exactly what was wrong. ben over at DevX helped me with it last night. I don't know why I didn't see it myself.

Edit:
Now that I've thought about some:

While I can give DevX and C++ Learning Community a big thumbs up, I have to give a big thumbs down to free2code.net. I made multiple posts about different problems trying to get help and was promptly ignored on everyone for a long time.

Good to hear. I think I will learn some C++ in the summertime. At the moment Java is my primary programming language. I know how annoying these things can be, I once searched 3 hours for what was wrong in a very big program, just to find out instead of "case 0x00" I changed it to "case 0x00a". Being a very big school project I had to go trough a lot of code.
