Just a little bit biased...the French kept English troops land locked in a very important battle...granted they just showed up practically for the one battle...but the English forces would have been able to take off and regroup somewhere else if it weren't for the French. The majority of Europe was taken over...at least the French didn't create a God complex over it.

besides...if you think the french always lose...then why would you want them fighting with us to begin with?
