From what I understand the level author intended the signboard to have an infantry blocker but forgot to add it in or something. I've used it to beacon before but it's unarguably an exploit and therefore needs to be fixed. The only people who would argue not to fix it would be people used to doing it, which are invalid points because they're only used to doing something which is already an exploit. It's the same thing like wall jumping, people argue not to fix walljumping because they are used to using it and erroneously consider it a tactic.

If the author of any level didn't intend for something to be done, then it shouldn't be done, regardless of how many people think it's valid.
