I have a Radeon 9500 Pro. It is the same chip as the 9700, but with a 128-bit memory controller instead of 256-bit.

I honestly don't know why you only get 5fps on a GF3. I got better than that on a GF2GTS.

However, on my system, with a 1.1ghz Athlon, I get around 40fps in 20-30 player games. I don't really play much higher than that, so i can't tell you what it would be like in 40p or higher.

The number might sound low, but keep in mind I'm talking about a Athlon 1.1 (100mhz FSB) with 512MB SDRAM. I also play in 2XAA/16XAF for great image quality, which drags my fps down. I belive if I turn it off, I'll get around 60fps in 20-30p games... but then it would look shitty.
