Here's an idea, how about you go outside and look at some real used metal. Compare it to concrete. I guarantee the only difference in surface texture will be that one probably has rust and the other doesn't.

Metal and concrete are similar in feel and looks. Even smoothed concrete can appear to be just like a bar of steel, and if you apply a gloss coat of paint on it, you'd never tell the difference.

I attacked your argument THEN called you a fucking idiot.. Because that's exactly what you are, in addition to being a forum troll with nothing positive to contribute to anything but your own overinflated sense of self-worth.
