Iv been reading some things around the net and watching some tv and there have been many people claming that the world will end come the year 2012. What is ur say in the matter? The mayan civilization's calender ended with the year 2012, alien ubduction victoms have been told of a revelation in humanity come the year 2012, people claim they have had vision of an angel tell them that all people will be sent into a gate (stargate if u will) that will send them though a worm hole into a galixy where humans will become part of a council of alien civilizations.

BTW: (definition) n. Ragnarok - the end of time.

believe it or not but i once had a day off school back in 1997 when we were told the world was gonna end on March 12th 1997 (or something) due to an asteroid that was gonna hit earth and that this was predicted by an ancient race who had seen the destruction of many adapt civilizations like Babylon and Egypt and the Incas and Aztecs....the moral.....the world could end in 2012, but then again i could get hit by a bus tomorrow and die so who cares? Life is life.....live it stop fearing the end of it coz you were dying the moment you were born and there is nothing you can do to stop it. Why care?

Hmm...the year's supposed to end in 2012....huh....well, let's see how many other years the world was supposed to come to and end...

2001
2002
2003
2004

World's not at an end yet. Just because someone knows the Maya caldener supposedly ended in 2012 and some crazy people who claim to be abducted by aliens just for a little publicity say some random stuff about 2012 doesn't mean crap. I hate stupid things like this. Besides, it would more than likely take magic to remove the world in 8 years.

IRON-FARTTThey said that Jesus will appear in the year 2000 also, and that the world will end.

By "they" I hope you do not mean that scripture said that, because the Word does not mention when the world will end; Jesus doesn't even know.

Majiin Vegetajesus does not exist thats why he never apeared at 2000
the world will not end in our life times

Jesus didn't appear in 2000 because the time wasn't yet. He may return in 2012, 5435, and so on. Who knows? Maybe he'll return tonight.

Anyway, about the Mayan Calendar, this fear has been around for awhile now. According to the Mayan people, whose ancestors made the calendar, say that the calendar ends in 2012 because after that there will a bright new age. It doesn't predict some massive bloody armageddon, it predicts an age of harmony.

People should look more into the culture where these "signs" originated. If that happened, much more people would understand things, such as the Bible.

Time measurement its-self is a man made item. How could it relate to gates, wormholes and revelations in humanity? Unless these events coincidentally happen at the same "time" as our 2012.

As far as a few other people in this thread have said, these fears have been around for a while and have often proven themselves to be hoaxes. Think of all the fears surrounding the reach of the "year 2000" which never happened. Is 2000 not of more significance than 2012? How did these 2012 fears/predictions originate?

Most likely someone/people made them up, since time is a man made item, men/women decided to hoax these things up for the year 2012 -- which is man made and does not exist except in our own measurements!

I dont want to start a holy war here ok! Shut up about ur god/no god opinions! Let people do what they do and leave them alone! Also about the mayan calender's 2012 thing many people think that 2012 will bring an age of global prosperity or some kind of enlightenment. Also i belive that life is something that we should look as a gift, life is really not nessessary in this universe. We should learn to care about one an other not just about ur self. I belive that we should learn about this posible event in 2012. I want humanity to continue into the future. I dont want this generation to be known as the one that let the end come with out fighting. If we were put on this earth for anything we should atleast try to achive our purpose which might come in the neer future or the far future.

As for the God and Jesus stuff....If your religion or lack of gives you strength in times of depression and hope in times of darkness, then power to you.....just dont try to shove it down the throats of others who have their own minds or opinions made in that area.....

Last but not least....if the bible is the word of god before all time, and states that he made the world in 6 days, rested on the 7th and the first 2 creatures he created were Man (adam) and woman (eve) and yet we have proven dinosaurs came before man or woman, why are they not mentioned in the bible?

Then, someone decided to write an addon to the 'Bible', and even they were confused to what to call themselves!

Hey! Let's all pray to the Bible because the Bible says so! Gee, if the Dictionary said to die, would we? If a comedian said the world will end in 2000, would we believe it?

Word of God before all time? I know that Timothy 3;16 says all scripture is given by inspiration of God, but where does it say that? I'm not being critical, just interested. If you're assumed that under the assumption of predestination, I'd recommend that you order the class, "Predestination and the Freedom of Will," which can be found here.

As for the dinosaurs, there is some interest in that some of the Hebrew words of Genesis 1:2, "tohu va bohu." What's the commotion about? Well, the word "was" changes to "became:"

Walking in God's Power: Foundational Class
Search on Google for "tohu va bohu" bigejoe14To start off, the Bible was written by several prophets. Not just one confused person. But since you seem to think that Christianity is "confusing" then it would be several confused people in your case.

Very true. The books contained in the Bible run from circa 1050 B.C. (Genesis) to 100 A.D. (Revelation). This time frame may be stretched further if the Book of Enoch is legitimate.

Speaking of which, they are many books that are supposedly scripture, but are not in the canonical texts. There are some references to such books like the Book of the Wars of the Lord or Book of Jasher.

More stuff about books not in the canonical Bible: <http://www.sacred-texts.com/chr/apo/index.htm>

Sorry about hijacking your topic, Gunny. I'm just sick and tired of people like xptek who always bring up crap. I for one am tired of "putting up" with people like him dissing God, Jesus, scripture, and so on. It's time my generation listened to God, before they cause more chaos and lies in this people wonder why holy wars start..... MrBob thinks agnostics or non-believers destroy his country.....infadels.....wait that reminds me havent we heard that word before? Just think where it lead serveral hundred countries just a few years ago.....all because one religion thought others were wrong....

Look at the Jews and Muslims they have slaughtered each other for thousands of years now and yet the blood still flows in their wars.....

Whats your point? If it were up to you would you kill of people who choose not to believe in god? Christian hypocrite? what about god "giving" the people free will, and in that will the right to choose, even if in his eyes it want the right choice? Yes? No? If yes then i believe you are being somewhat contradictive of yourself. If no then i believe both the bible and the religion you hold so dear is a contradiction in itself.

But in hummanity people are free to choose, free to live how they please. The only thing that may stop them is being thrown in Jail...but they still made that choice. All i can say is the non-believers will never believe, the Christians will never forget....so stop trying to ram it down the throats of others.

EEK! GunRun, why didn't you tell me about this topic?

Before I start, here's to all you retards who have to revolt against some one just because their of a different religion: If you living like there is no god you better be right.

Any way, this is one of the few topics of don't have much solid information on, mostly because no one does, here is my explanation:

I don't want to go into this, but any one who is religious would know stories about super natural things within their religion; angels and resurrections are examples. Most current religions were formed by an angel telling a person something and in turn, that person spreading it around. I'll get back to this in a bit, after you read all of this it will come together.

A Very long time ago large pools of water (soon to be oceans) life appeared and evolved at an alarming rate. Scientists are still puzzled on how it got there but it just seemed to start. Earth could actually have been seeded by an advanced alien race, or as an experiment. Or the organic compounds just formed by themselves.

Now to the Mayans, there is strong evidence of their interaction with extraterrestrial life, or they were just really smart: A small stone model of an air plane was found in a temple that was thought to be sealed for thousands of years. If you fly over the desert there you will see huge "runways" in the ground, so big you wouldn't notice it on the ground, just a small drop while walking. The Egyptians actually have records of activities that would be alien to us.

Now, on to the 2012 thing, it could very well be true. Now if you didn't put it together already, what I've been saying is that God, or any other god for that matter, angels, and other things like that are aliens who have been watching over us for thousands of years. If you still think this is bullshit, there are documents, and other things showing the probable of existence of aliens who are observing us. Like a recording from an Apollo mission that described what an astronaut was seeing over on the other side of a creator. If any one remembers the story of , it was a city that was destroyed, and a man and his family were told they could leave before it was destroyed because they were the only good ones, but they could not turn around and look back or they would be turned into a pillar of salt, here is the scientific explanation: Aliens destroyed the city to show something, most likely what happens when your a bad little human, but the thing that makes the story special is the pillar of salt thing. Certain energies and materials mixed together are actually capital of turning some organic substances onto a salt compound. This would make a connection with a nuclear weapon, extremely advanced of course. The aliens did not want them to see what was going on, most likely to keep the man thinking it was god condemning the city. Then you have mosses, the top of mount Sinai or how ever you spell it, there was a storm going on, mosses might have been aboard a ship, being instructed on what to do. These are just accuracies were aliens tried to steer humans in a direction they wanted.

What I'm getting at is that is fully possible that it could happen, but when was the last time people were major steered by acts of god? A very long time ago. This could point to a cancellation of them showing us themselves, or postponement. They know that we will probably react with force other then try to learn about them.

Silly but everything has evidence....what does the evidence point to? Belief....

Oh and Budha isnt a religion from Angels or Gods of any kind...research it, Siddat Gotama was a muslim prince who saw suffering, walked into the wild and meditated until he starved to death and reached "enlightenment" no gods there....their gods are those who are enlightened ones and even they arent devine in nature, just in stature....

It all seems fasniating to me, but so did the whole "the world is gonna end in 1997" crap and im still here.

What created the big rock? Simply this, every few maybe trillion years the universe collapses on itself and then explodes again. This is all part of the big bang theory. The Universe itself is actually infinite time old, but this stage of it, which is the infinite stage of infinite stages, is mealy a few hundred billion years old. Then it expands and collapses in on itself and a new universe is born.

Then there's the branch theory that other universe are created though black holes and continue in the same fission of explaining and contracting.

I'd like to know how you can explain that "other universes" (WITHIN THIS UNIVERSE, mind you,) are created by compressed matter exploding. In fact, I'd like to see proof of a blackhole that has "exploded" in the first place.

Javaxcx, what? Anyway, I'll get the name of the theory and get a site on it, its the most popular theory on how the universe works.

Here's a picturefyed explanation, sorry for the other one cuz I wrote it up quick so some of you didn't understand.

Ok, there's a model similar to the one that was used when I learned it. Time is represented by purple to cyan. The whole model is not happening at once, only one at a time is going on and any given moment, plus all branches. The branch starts on the time line were the black hole formed and continues on until its disconnected when its mother universe collapses to an infinitely small size to form a new universe in a big bang process. The life of a universe is like this: (1) big bang, (2) expansion, (3) shrinkage, (4) compression, (5) big bang. The branches are formed from black holes sucking out material from one universe and dropping it off in a new one created on the time of the black hole creation. This plays a part in the multivers theory, were there are an infinite amount of universe (which are infinitely large) in an infinitely large space. Mind boggling if you think about it.

Finally, NastyDead, I'm not old, and I'm not forcing anything on you, there is no solid evidence and there never will be, if current physics holds true, we will never see anything to help us know if this is fact. These are merely popular and well supported theories. Although there is evidence of the big bang theory in our own universe. X-Ray, and UV ray photos have been taken of light still traveling to us from past occurrences. This can also tell us how the universe is infinitely large, by folding back on itself. This is true for a shape thingy with a certain name (I forgot) were if you were to walk forward, you would go on forever but really you would still be in the same space. I don't want to go into this a lot cuz I don't have hours to write it all out. You can look some stuff up online.

The only thing that model can describe is a theoretical timeline of the universe, where the elipses represent one cycle of all the matter and energy in existence.

For starters, that's not the most popular theory about how the universe works. The one that is actually widely accepted (thanks to growing evidence) is an open universe theory where there has and will only be ONE cycle of the universe. After the theoretical big bang, matter will continue you expand outward for eternity until the also theoretical "heat death" of the universe. This assumes that the void that is space is an infinite distance OR infinite loop. Oh, and don't expect to draw an "infinite loop" diagram of the universe, because it cannot be done in 3 dimenions.

Secondly, for your theory to work, there is alot of theoretical physics that deduces how unlikely that actually is. For the universe to compress upon itself, the acceleration that matter is undergoing right now will have to be overtaken by a pull of gravity GREATER than the force of acceration forcing the universe outward as we speak. So essentially, gravity would have to have an exponentail effect greater to that of the exponential effect of acceleration, otherwise we're going to continue to fly outwards for eternity.

You don't have to talk to me like I'm an idiot. I even explained how the infinite loop univers worked, just i forgot the name of the therum/equation what ever, i gtg.

Not a big rock, but all matter that compressed itself to a supposed limit imposed by string theory, at which point everything violently erupted outward. Then, as everything was shooting away from each other, gravity started to make clumps, or galaxies. And here we are.

What created the "rock"? Why, perhaps it has existed for all eternity. I doubt the human mind can understand the concept. Well, what created god? Or has god always been there? Or why does God, although being all-powerful, so on and so forth, have human limitations like design and create, and yet gets to be around forever, something humans can't understand? So, god gets to be some human things and some non-understood things.

Just a thought.

No, there isn't going to be Global cooling either because the Earth has been coming out of an ice age for the last 10 thousand years.

Pollution from cars etc have not been the sole contributor to global warming, but they have contributed. And they do reduce air quality in the long run.

The effect caused by cars is insignificant when compared with the effect of natural forces such as the cycle of sunspots. IF the Earth is indeed getting warmer, it's caused by natural forces and not by humans.
