Wellz, the easier way to save/gain credits is to attack the harvester and tanks with light-weight weapons or with repair gun.

Tactic on destroyin' Medium Tanks:

Grab a buggy and have a partner change to Engineer and fill the thing with REMOTE c4s and then change to sniper. Slowly and carefully drive your buggy near a Medium Tank and yell "I'm In Position". Your partner then detonates the c4s by switching to TIMED C4 and right-clicks. and yeah! Baby. You have successfullie destroyed a Medium Tank with a buggy [kinda cheap huh?]

I have more but they're kinda all for me! XD

This is a nice idea that has been posted before, but it wouldn't blow up a medium tank and it's a total waste of mines. Remotes and prox mines are used to protect buildings and blow up buildings, they are not really meant for anti-tank offense.

The problem with this is you have to very dependant on a superior defense team. As you deploy all those remotes they count against your mine limit, which BTW is 30. Only Proximity and Remotes pile up towards that limit. A good technician or hotwire may have had the base all mined to protect from intrusion but now you have removed all those proxies for all your remotes that are a one time shot at maybe injuring a stronger vehicle. Don't get me wrong it is fun, though I'd only do it with friends.

wellz, i think it takes 5 remotes to destroy the med tank and 7 for the mammoth. I have a very dependent partner named Itako. He has been in the same games as me almost everyday. Itako is most helpful in 2 vs 2 or 8 vs 8 games. he is SO dependent. he usually (in our case) is a suicide bomber in our group/clan.

I've almost given up on mining in my base anyway, since nobody really gets stopped by mines anymore- and anyone who does is usually not bright enough to do any damage anyway. Whenever I use a tech/hotwire, I'm too busy running around repairing stuff to lay mines(building under attack, tank back from a battle, infantry, turrets, etc). They're more of an early warning system now than they ever were a defensive weapon; they make a nice big boom youn can hear across the base, but will almost never get a kill.

This could be pulled off on maps with few entrances and defenses that can cover all the entrances(Hourglass, Under, Field) Where at least one or two buildings are not likely to be hit by an APC rush. Then you could easily spare the mines that would have been used on that building and apply them to a tactic like this.

I find just the opposite. People get bored and try new nuking tactics and having a good prox pattern in base is key to defending against this. If you don't mine on Islands as GDI you can pretty much bend over and kiss your arse goodbye. Same goes for Field.

Yeah, I don't know where you play but defense is key always. Under is another map where Nod really needs to mine well to prevent people walking in the back door. You can get to everything but the refinery if you can clear the first stretch where the ob can shoot you...

And on maps with no base defenses, not mining means you want to lose.

On any tactic: If you can use it, it is legal, and it works, go for it. A lot people wouldn't simply because the driver gets no points out of the deal, so if there's even so much as one person in this game who is willing to sacrifice their score for that of the team..

This tactic sounds best applied when the enemy team is camping right outside your base and pointwhoring on a structure not protected by the base defense (i.e. the Nod airstrip on Under) and would be good to take out a few tanks that will just not go away.

Debating is an art form that does NOT use insults to stress a point. Debating is logical, and adreses valid points using proofs, and is usually backed by testimonials, and references to accepted literature in the intellectual community. It is also respectful of the counter-opinion, while still at odds with it.

KIRBY098I don't believe I was referring to you or your paranoia, but if you want to accept responsibility for it publicly, more power to you.

It's not the paranoia that's the problem, it's the manic depression, suicidal nature and self induced psychological schizophrenia. As for admitting it publically, I'm just sick and tired of lying about who I am, so I decided to let on to everyone the truth, including random people on the internet I don't even know (I can be strange about these things).

KIRBY098Debating is an art form that does NOT use insults to stress a point. Debating is logical, and adresses valid points using proofs, and is usually backed by testimonials, and references to accepted literature in the intellectual community. The comment about debating was a joke, I'm fully aware that this is merely an argument. Also referencing other peoples work isn't a debate, it's just being to lazy/incompotent to back up your view point with your own theories. I can accept some usage of other literature, but far too often people rely on it as there only sorce of proof, this is leading to a decadent society.

KIRBY098Conditions that are definately not being met here. This is not a debate, it's a quasi-flame war, over an internet chick who posted someone else's picture.

Firstly where's your proof that that is not a picture of her, frankly whether it is or not was never an issue to me. All I'm concerned about with regards to her is the fact that she is trying to be civil, a trait that is too often lacking among members of this forum (myself included). My contention was with Deathgods actions, I take an extreme dislike to people who try to harm others, be it physically or emotionally. I admit that my initial tactic of attempting to drive him off with insults, be they intelectual or of the usual homophobic variety, was at best useless and at worse will have antagonised the situation. I am now however trying to understand the others viewpoint, beliefs and justifications, whilst still remaining at odds with them, this at least qualifies as a debate.

Negative.

Referencing another acedemic's work in thier specialized field is not lazy. It takes true wisdom to realize there are others far more intelligent than oneself, and bow to thier superior knowledge in that arena. One must develop a prudent, and relevant theory based on certifiable and public knowledge bases. Not one's best guess based on what they think they have fully researched.

That being said: Yes, there is great merit in finding things out for oneself, yet the true wise man is the one who knows he is a fool. When debating I routinely reference scientific and political quotes, and data bases. I refute the idea that that somehow makes me an ignorami because I draw from those sources.

Decadence in our society is attributable to a great many things, but laziness is not the root. It's an effect, not a cause.

Like I said, referncing others work on occaision is prudent, but there are people who do it over much, from the sounds of things you are the formar not the latter and I commend you for that. To use on of my rare references I will pint to the works of Isaac Asimov, in the book "Foundation" there was a highly recognised and lauded Archeological Historian (Lord Dorwin), however he would have a nervous fit if some-one suggested that he actually research a historical site himself. To him the "proper scientific method [as I see it]" was to "weigh up what the greats of the past have said" and from there come to his own reasonable conclusion. He recognised greater minds but he did that to such an extent that he was incable of believing that he himself could create a new theory, this scientific decadance was the main cause of the stagnation and eventual collapse of the Galactic Empire. A similar them,e runs through David Brin's Uplift Trilogies with regards to the Library of the five galaxies. My previous attempt did not convey the point very well, hopefully this one will do better.

To add to this there are a great many scientists who have refused reference others in their field, instead they chose to research the subject themselves, whilst often this has been time consuming and fruitless there are times when this hasd proven a theory wrong, or at least incomplete. The biggest example of this in recent years is the advent of Quantum physics, whilst Einstinien law does make allowances for Quantum mechanics Newtonian law disagrees with it completely, we are now face with the fact that whilst we have based almost all of our technology on a science that appears to work it may be based upon a science that is wrong, this could lead to devatating consequences. However it is usefull to reference others, as long as it is done with prudence it speeds up the rate of advance without building upon unstable structur (Newton).

Btw, I wholehaertedly agree with you on the subject of greater minds, with regard sto mathem,atics I am ranked within the top percentile in Britain and the top 12% in Europe, I also have a numerical I.Q somewhere in the region of 180. Through all this the most potent lesson I have learnt is just how little I actually know and how vast an amount there is to learn.

Oh, and laziness is both an effect and cause of decadance in society.

DeathgodA) You first, you threw out the "people like you" moniker on me.

Phoenix - AeonMy contention was with Deathgod's actions, I take an extreme dislike to people who try to harm others, be it physically or emotionally.

This is a personality trait you admitted to having and indeed enjoying. I would also like to apologise for my actions there, neither of us should have to resort to terms such as "people like you", doing so was a reprehensible action on my part.

DeathgodB) I need to justify nothing to anyone besides myself, and the result was the justification for me in this case. It's always amusing to watch the nerdgasm that ensues when you make fun of the cute girl's stupidity.

True, but I was not asking you to justify yourself, as far as I'm concerned there are no justifications for your actions. I am however asking you to explain what you think your justifications are.

Through this understanding I would hope to be able to communicate with you better. Also as I have already said I couldn't give a shit what Rikkye looks like, so please don't assume that I am defending the cute girls, this is a matter of principle to me.

DeathgodDunno what the hell that has to do with anything. Thanks for reminding us the world is full of mistakes that evolution sadly no longer works against, I guess. Not that I need that, I just take a trip to the mall whenever I need reaffirmation on the lackluster quality of society here in the US.

Absoloutly nothing, but please do enlighten me as to what is wrong with bisexuality and homosexuality. I have a somewhat personal interest in this and as yet no-one has come up with a convincing argument, people can't get it into their head that saying that it's an abomination in the eyes of God isn't going to bother an Athiest.

Ok, how about this:

The parts weren't designed to go together.

If you ram a sqare peg in a round hole, should I tell you that what you did was correct, despite the fact that the square peg clearly was designed for the square hole?

Yes but getting into a relationship for me has nothing to do with pegs and holes, it's the personality that counts.

Truth is truth, irregardless of rationalization, and opinion.

I can never tell you that I accept your opinion as ok, because it goes against the stark reality that those parts just do not go together. A man and a woman were designed to complement each other.

Were't you the one who was complaining about flaming? Here we are having a perfectly calm discussion and you decide to flame people. I find that somewhat ironic.

@Kirby

Men and women were designed for nothing, it is pure chanced that has shaped us into what we are. The fact is that anybody can appreciate the beauty in a member of the same sex, even if they are not attracted to them. It's pretty much the same as a guy saying "yeah she's good looking but I don't fancy her".

It would probably help if you knew something about me, as far as sex goes I'm not really bothered unless I'm wasted. Because of this I tend to be physically attracted to people in the way outlined above. Also all I care about is the non-physical side of things, love if you will, though it is rarely anything near that potent. I will say this, when it's comes down to finding people sexually attractive, wantinbg to have sex with them, I feel that way only about women. It's just I'm prepared to accept companianship whether it comes from a man or a woman. I happily kiss a man as those parts are indeed the same and I will go down on a man for there enjoyment whilst I don't enjoy it (who does?). However I will not have sex with a man, though this is more to do with a general dislike of anal.

Btw, it is refrehing to talk to someone who disagrees with bi and homosexuality and manages not to yell something like fag or assrammer constantly. Thankyou for that.

Well, it then comes down to a religious opinion. It's not the "parts" that control our actions as much as our brains. A chemical chance that a man may enjoy oranges over grapes instead of grapes over oranges is not so different from a chemical chance that a man may enjoy the company of women over men instead of men over women.

I'm the kind of guy who is happy with both oranges and grapes, metaphorically of course. Actually I can't stand grapes or oranges, analogies are dangerous things. Still you have managed to quite succinctly make a point that I was struggling to come up with a way to make, namely that really from my angle it's just the same as having different tastes in women. I commend you.

God has nothing to do with my views on homosexuality, because I am not religious.

I feel that it is a genetic trait designed into species for a reason, just like anything else. I say it is a mistake because in the whole survival of the fittest plan, not reproducing makes you lose. Thus, anyone who is homosexual has 'losing' genes. I can't see any real benefit to the species by having a bunch of the population not reproduce unless there is something wrong with their genes, and I have a feeling that when we understand more about the way the human genome works there will be some evidence of this.

That's about the extent of my interest on the topic, really. I don't care what people do behind closed doors or in the privacy of their own homes, though I do get annoyed by all the people who like to flaunt that they're gay, as if it makes them cooler than everyone else. Then again, I hate any kind of 'minority' people who like to flaunt their differences as being better than everyone else. News flash: you're 99.99999% the same as every other person here. Any difference is perceived in your mind.

That's a bad example. A man who doesn't like grapes can change his mind after eating them over time to like grapes. I don't think I could look around at guys enough to make me go hump one.

Well I think there was argueing about you, then there was argueing about how people reacted you. After that we argued about the fact that we were argueing. Of course I might be wrong in thinking that, my thinking is at the moment influenced by a lot of rather nice scotch wiskey.

I think people around here argue over anything, as long as they have something to argue over. If there's nothing to argue over, they'll argue about whether or not there's something to argue over.

you can guard your buggy/hummer (and im talking about the car) from theft and c4 attacks only if you dont care about the mine limit though just get someone else to pack prox mines around every inch of the buggy/ and when you pass an engi they wont get close enough to c4 u without dying and when u get out if they try to get in they will either die or the buggy will blow up either way they dont get your buggy

(i havent tried this yet) but you could probably drive right up next to a turret and let it blow if you dont get destroyed before u get there could work with a few buggies (maybe 3 could get it) provided they dont repair straight away u could probably get it (but it may not be worth the money to do it)

only draw back so far i can think of is if u run into a few others first and lose all the mines
