You can vote for your cat if you want too, after all, in the official election there is a blank line for you to write a name down a vote for, so just write your cats name down on that blank and select the vote on that, since your not going to vote bush and you appear to think Kerry isn't the wiser of the 2 either.

I would be funny as hell if a cat did get voted to office by some random and completely unorthodox event. It will never happen, but at least it could make a funny Comedy Central gag. And the winner of the pers. election, Gizbotvas Cat!

Umbral_DelaFlareA vote for Bush is a vote for terrorism!

I do believe the Republican party has someone WAY better than Bush to offer (come on, even the hardcore Republicans have to admit he has made SOME mistakes), but my loyalties are firm. Hmm, like who? About the only thing George W. Bush has done that I disapprove of is the humungous budget he submitted to Congress which then overspends on everything in the already too large budget. That medicare bill he signed into law was the worst action he has done during his presidency as there should be no welfare, medicare or social security government-funded programs at all.

But that's about it. His economic policies have brought us out of the Clinton recession and the War on Terrorism is going better than expected. His massive spending habits are about the only bad things that I see in him.

Oh, so this is why the Liberals and Democrats are so upset then. I always thought they focused too much on money. Granted I have to agree that Bush needs to spend money much wiser, but the bases of the Liberals and Democrats lack of support seems to souly be based on money. Did you know that a lot of times when money is wasted, it is due more to a lack of co-operation and a profesionsy of backstabing and mistrust, as well as desires to element political compitistion? Really, people are just throughing money away just to cause sinsless betrayal and finger pointing, whining about other people and their faults, rather then supporting them and taking reaponsability for their own actions.

Oh, so this is why the Liberals and Democrats are so upset then. Actually, the Democrats want to spend even more money on failed social programs like welfare. The Democrats are upset at Bush for doing so well as a president and are looking for anything they might be able to make an issue out of. Before it was the War on Terrorism, but with the success Bush has had with it, it is no longer an issue. Now it's the economy and jobs, but both are improving drastically, but the Democrats will do their best to degrade the success of the economy just so they would have an issue to use against George Bush.

If both of the moron politicians would spend less money on ads bashing the other and more on building up credentials for themselves...

Kerry changes his mind too damn often to be a reliable choice. Bush may not be the best president ever, but at least you know where you stand with him. And given the rather hectic nature of world events during his presidency, I think he's doing better than could be expected.

Note that I think most politicians on the political scene now are piles of shit who are interested more in themselves than in the country...the people who need to be in office are the people who don't want to be there.[/disclaimer] hydra, ggetting back to what you were saying about voting for the wrong person because of silly reasons, here's something you should look at:

Crimson: Well, of course we may find WMDs. We may find anything. I may find WMDs in my fridge when I go up to grab a snack. Highly unlikely, but still technically possible. Besides, the Bush administration could always plant WMDs.

You know damn well that Kerry wouldn't have said "we may yet find [WMD]" if the possibility were as unlikely as you finding them in your fridge.

"Kerry knows what everyone with a memory knows: which is that Saddam had WMD and the world agreed he had them. Perhaps they were destroyed, perhaps hidden, perhaps trucked to Syria, but he had them. Thank you, Mr. Kerry, for your only contribution to the public's understanding of the war to date."

Crimson, even if there is a possibility, it would look bad to Kerry if he said we won't find WMDs in Iraq and then we found even a zip-loc bag of anything that could possibly be considered a WMD, regardless of whether or not it comes out that the WMD bag was a plant. Also, did that quote come straight from Lim-Butthead?

SuperFlyingEngiWhat the hell was he supposed to say when Congress asked him whether he was havin an affair or not?
When you're under oath, he is supposed to say the truth.

He was accused of sexually harassing Paula Jones, and Monica Lewinsky signed an affidavit for Paula Jones's lawyer that says she did not have an affair with Bill Clinton. You can't lie on an affidavit.

Get it through your head that he was not impeached for getting his dick sucked but for lying under oath. That's called perjury, which is categorized as a F-E-L-O-N-Y. Do you know what else is categorized as a F-E-L-O-N-Y for which Bill Clinton was under investigation? Obstruction of justice. Bill Clinton was impeached for committing TWO FUCKING F-E-L-O-N-I-E-S.

Quote:That's such a bastard question. Plus, it's not a policy.

No, it's a legitimate question when it's written on a fucking affidavit that he didn't have an affair with her.

So what if there's a book about George W. Bush's misquotes? What does that say about his intelligence? Absolutely nothing. All it says is that George W. Bush is not a good orator. Besides, why would you care about how many misquotes a person has made before? Shouldn't the candidate's stance on the issues be more important? Apparently it isn't to you since you support a man who has changed positions on each issue he touches more than a two dollar crack whore changes sex partners.

Alright, I'll get back to the other stuff in a week or so after school gets out and I have time to do things, but first, hydra:

It's not just that some people think it's silly to write books full of President Bush mispronouncing things. The case may be that he is dyslexic. During the 9/11 attack, when Bush was at the school reading books to children, and was informed that the towers were being hit by planes, he just sits there reading the book for another 7 minutes. Behavioral psychologists look at this [which is on tape and will be in Fahrenheit 9/11, I believe] and say, "Oh my god, this is what we teach dyslexic children to do when they are reading." Another instance is when he was asked by some reporters what his first book was, and he said some random kid title like "Run dog run" or something, and ok. But as we look back, "Run dog run" [or whatever the hell it was called] was first published when he was 19.

And on flip-flopping issues: Like what? Please name some so I can get back to those.

Thanks for the heads up on the typo.

Please tell me you did not just justify Bush's idiocy by comparing a typo of mine to a completely made up word by arguably (and sadly) the most important man in the world. One would hope that someone of such high importance would have more intelligence anyway...

So I'm sorry, sir, but your response is not "nuff said". My signature typo was a mechanical error, not a logical error. The latter is much more important concerning one's overall intelligence.

hydra1945 Apparently it isn't to you since you support a man who has changed positions on each issue he touches more than a two dollar crack whore changes sex partners.

I should have been more specific before: I don't necessarily support Kerry. I wouldn't vote for Kerry because I like him or his stance on the issues...I would vote for him because he is not Bush. Here's a website that demonstrates my feelings about the whole thing very well:

PointlessAmbler/me wonders why there is so much Bush support on virtually every Renegade/Renegade mod forum

I'm surprised too. Most other forums (all non-political, just games forums and such) I visit are left-winged.

hydra1945GizbotvasCause anything is better than what we've got now.
If Josef Stalin was running for president, would you campaign for him since he "isn't Bush?"
:rolleyes:

Considering that Stalin is:

- a) Dead
- b) Not eligible to become President of the USA

Seems a rather stupid question, doesn't it?

No fucking duh he's dead. It was a hypothetical question.

Sad thing is, if he WAS alive and WAS eligible to run for president, you'd probably vote for him since he "isn't Bush."

DaveGMM...but he isn't... so this isn't likely to become a real situation.

That is where the word hypothetical comes in.

And I visit two other forums.

<http://forum.americasarmy.com>

In the R&R section. There are more conservative/republicans than liberal democrats.

But on

<http://www.zgeek.com>

That place is overwhelmingly extremist liberal.

I could use some help.

It seems every other thread is about how stupid I am. then their victory is 20 people calling me an idiot.

I have only screwed up twice on there. I thought someone in montey python was Canadian. And I said Don King instead of Rodney King.

It's a typical human response to react to the negative more than the positive. People define themselves by their misery. People LOVE to compare who has it worse than the other guy. I bet 75-80% of you right now would say "Oh, my childhood was rough!" Everyone is doing better than they were 4 years ago, but they're worried that their neighbor isn't. Then you have the left-wing media doing all they can to make us think we're in this horrible miserable time. It's more fun to hate... especially when there's the trend to be "different". Who wants to feel like a conformist and agree with whoever is in office?

Crimson especially when there's the trend to be "different". Who wants to feel like a conformist and agree with whoever is in office?

I hate people that try to be different.

They are the most stupid people in the world.

Yeah, like the trend to be "crazy"... "Normal people scare me." "I don't suffer from insanity, I enjoy every minute of it"... you know the trend. Agreeing with someone in authority/power...

"If Josef Stalin was running for president, would you vote for him since he 'isn't Bush?'" "Josef Stalin is dead." "I know he's dead, numbnuts. Let's say he was alive and eligible to run for president against Bush. Would you vote for him?" "But he isn't alive, so this isn't a likely situation." Dave, it was a fucking hypothetical question. Don't reply to it if your reply isn't intelligent. Great attempt at derailing the topic!

Yeah, except your question is just a huge exaggeration that doesn't mean anything. Because John Kerry is no Josef Stalin.

CrimsonThen you have the left-wing media

If it were true, that would be a good one! There is no overwhelming left-wing media. If anything, FOX is right-wing slanted by a huge margin. There's a reason they are cable news and not FCC-approved. Because they lie and distort so much it's just an entertainment channel and the FCC would wipe them right off the air.

NodbuggerIt seems every other thread is about how stupid I am. then their victory is 20 people calling me an idiot.

Sounds like you declaring llamaman451 to be an idiot and claiming a victory. Hypocrite.

Bush all the way. If any other president was elected, Iraq along with every city in the US would be a smoking crater within the hour because of their stupid policies.
