A few days ago, I gave Jonathan Wilson an Interview about the scripts.dll project he has done for the C&C: Renegade Community.

Here's a mini part of it:

Quote:1. Why did you feel that you should do your own custom scripts.dll's?
Jonathan - I started the scripts.dll after Westwood Studios/EA decided (for whatever reasons) not to release the source code to the official scripts.dll. I didn't just suddenly decide to do the custom scripts.dll, it slowly happened bit by bit, most of it came from when I was trying to figure out how the existing scripts works and what they where used for. From there it became scripts.dll.

You can read the rest here.

Um, Jonathan since when was Dante "bad"?

See # 13 reply

13. Do you think someone would of done the same thing if you didn't start doing scripts.dll?
Jonathan - I don't know, scripts.dll wouldn't be where it is today without the help of people like Olaf Van Der Spek, Dante (back when he was helpful instead of being bad) and many others.

He has never been anything EXCEPT helpful.

It's working correctly.

I still can't see how Dante is "bad," he only released a ton of helpful source..

This was before the source code, I think I did it about a week ago. He said that to me in the interview so I can't say thing about it!

Wow, this whooped my interview (as well as the interview of Ren Realm) out of of the sky. Full of content, very informative.

Looks like my internet adoptive little brother has gone far.

They grow up SO fast...
