Damn, I haven't played PB in a loooooong time.

Equipment:

Tippmann Pro-Lite Marker

12" Dye Ceramic Barrel
12 oz. CO2
Daisy Laser Point Sight

After that, it's the usual. Camo clothes, balls, Mask, etc.

Please tell me that's not a Halo B on a Tippmann.....

(For the paintball-illiterate, a Halo B is a loader, A.K.A. "hopper" that feeds paintballs at up to somewhere around 20 rounds per second. This is godly in the paintball world. Unfortunately, a Tippmann 98 can only reach the neighborhood figure of around 6-8 rounds per second, if you have quick fingers. Basically he spent more on the loader than he did on the gun.)

A smidge of advice Kooleo, if you're going to use an electric hopper, best to have an electric marker first.

I've got a Tippman 98C, myself. Pretty much everything on it is stock, except for the 16oz tank. I haven't invested too much money into it for the simple fact that the arenas around here suck.

I would like to, however, get the C7 custom kit. Turn that puny little PoS into a paintball semi/automatic rifle. It needs work though.

My greatest annoyance with paintballing is the tanks. I've always been rather aggressive with them, and have broken value after value after value just diving for cover. It's not the adapter, it's just a poorly placed concept.

To aid that, I want to get one of those belts with a CO2 line connecting the tank to the gun that goes around the body.

C7? WHERE?!?!?

Seriously, do you mean this:

Yup, same one. There is an adaptation kit for the 98C that will work the paintball gun to look (and act, to a CERTAIN extent) like the C7A1.

I prefer real guns.

Paintball is fun, but I don't have the money to spend on it.

I play with the real ones at work. You can't just shoot people for fun with them, though.

It's ok, but it's old. I have a newer one.
