But I did anyway. Which follows installing some random program that probably contains spyware just to view the movie.

The movie was OK, but I suggest you learn how to change your resolution before you use Fraps 1.9, otherwise half of your screen is cut off and it looks like shit.

That wasn't the Red Alert intro, that was the prologue/preview movie, the Red Alert intro was the one that had the Red Alert logo open, revealing the Hinds/Longbows following a mammoth tank in the snow firing missiles at it before it went to the main menu.

Actually, they're quite different. A prologue is usually a self-contained narrative that has some kind of insight into the story it precedes. An intro just shouts, "Hey this is what you're looking at!"

It doesn't matter how similar or not their meanings are. They are two completely different movies, the Red Alert intro is the one that plays each time you start Red Alert, shows the Red Alert logo open showing the Hinds attacking a mammoth tank. The Prologue was the one that played once when it was first installed, showed Einstein/Hitler then the crossing titles while going down the hall, then the little movie clips of the tanks/helicopters/etc.

Why would hinds attack mammoth tanks? Aren't they on the same side?

I thought it was the Longbow, attacking a mammoth, or a Longbow attacking a heavy tank. Now that I think of it, I'd go with the latter.

No, the actual intro movie in Red Alert shows a group of Hinds chasing a mammoth tank in the snow, and the lead hind firing two missiles at it.

(The Red Alert autorun window shows the same scene in the background but with Longbows.)

Read the instructions on the site, derrr.

And if you're talking about the .rar file, you have to download WinRar here: <http://www.rarlab.com/>

.Rar > .Zip

Nuff said.

It is O.k, I already opened it, but I had some problems.
When I clicked on the url, instead of downloading, the movie would start (and it is not supposed to, because it is inside the .rar file, and no media player can run .rar files), but Netscape would just display some weird stuff that did not make sence at all, so I had to download the file from the location, unzip it with winrar, and THEN I was able to view it.
