Nader's cut from the ballot in at least a couple states, an independent election company looked at all of Nader's signatures, and it turns out over 70% of them were false.

Looks like the Republicans forgot to cover up their tricks.

70%?!? Do you have a source of that?

I did read that a lot of registered republicans gave their signature to get Nader on the ballot's though (in some regions), which is pretty sad.

Any News that isn't American pretty much hates America. They are all idiots.

And you are wrong about FOX.

I believe the correct figures are 64% of Canadian teens think America is a force of evil and 74% of French Canadian teens thinks America is a force of evil.

Yes, I get British, German, Vietnamese, and Japanese news stations at my house. They are all dubbed over in English.

You are wrong about FOX.

And I meant 'Lets see how evil we are when Canada gets invaded by turkey'

It is a joke. I was watching a comedy show one day and a guy was talking about Canada. I believe the joke went.

'What if Canada invaded some other country...like turkey. Look at that military strategy, lying dormant for 275 years. They show up in Turkey one day 'WERE TAKIN IT Fuckers, and we are renaming it CHICKEN!'

cowmisfitFACT: half of canadian teens think America is the devil.

I can only speak for the teens that I work with at the base downtown, but most of them don't think America is evil. They think the man in charge is a crook, and they're right. But that is as far as it goes.

Quote:FACT: Canada will not allow fox news into canada because there afraid there people will see the truth.

Ok, this is a blantant lie. "I" get FOXnews. And it spews out just about as much truth as CNN.

Quote:FACT: Because of these two FACTS aprimes view of the world and our polotics is probably extreamly twisted.

Considering both are not true, does that mean that his "politics" are now extremely correct?

Quote:FACT: You must see both sides of news , left wing and right wing to really know how the world works and understand whats going on. Canadians have one

I suggest you throw an unbiased 3rd party into that mix. If you only listen to right-wing media, or you only listen to left-wing media, you will definately have a bias against the other. You'll question the content of the other and unequivocally believe everything that "your" media front puts out. A 3rd party source won't lie or construe information for either side.

I don't blame the French Canadians one bit given the reception that has been fairly common from your country toward many of their French heritage.

Ahhh, the blame game begins again...

Does it dawn on any of you that if Nader were "stealing" votes from Bush, it would be the Republicans bitching about him being on the ballot?

And as far as I know, there's no law that explicitly forbids a candidate from running for President when he'll be taking votes away from one major party or the other. Major elections have been decided that way- Howard Taft was voted out of office because former President Theodore Roosevelt drew too many Republican votes, allowing Democrat Woodrow Wilson to be elected.

Is Nader taking votes that otherwise would have gone to Kerry? Yes, of course he is. He's trying to get elected; naturally he's going to try to get all the votes he can. If you don't want him in office, don't fucking vote for him. It's that simple.

PantherIt is my belief that Nader is running either because he's stupid or he's intentionally taking votes. He should very well know he won't win, or really even get close.

1. I don't think Nader is stupid. Look at his education record.
2. I also don't think he is aiming to take votes away from anyone. And since he's not stupid, he knows he isn't going to win. He's out to make a statement, a statement that he's not going to give in to monopolized American politics, and that he will stand for what he believes. Look at all the criticism he's endured.

I agree with knight1b and Crimson in that if the Democrats had a strong position to begin with they wouldn't look to blame everyone else for their problems. They did it in 2000 and they're doing it again this year. There's a poll analysis at <http://prorev.com/green2000.htm> that shows little connection between Gore and Nader votes.

Quote:In the close Florida race, there were similar results: statistically insignificant correlation when the Gore tally changed by only one or two points, but dramatic non-correlation when the change was bigger. For example, in nine successive surveys in which Nader pulled only 2 or 3 points, Gore's total varied by 7 points.

We know a candidate is not only made of his views, but his personality as well. Nader communicates his ideas more clearly, like Bush, than does Kerry (while the Senator explains why he supports both sides of whatever issue is at hand). Let's think about hypothetical Nader voters, if they had to vote for someone else -- would they all really want to listen to John Kerry play defensive all the time? While they would probably have more Democratic views, they still want a man of action, not dodgeball. Perhaps Kerry should back Nader, not the other way around.

AlostSOull'm a republican, but I don't support Nader. Nader and Arnold should switch to democracy, they act exactly like KERRY!!!
Don't disgrace my party by calling yourself a Republican, sw33t.

SuperFlyingEngicowmisfit, FOX News is not the truth. It is one big batch of steaming hot crap.

Foreign news is much better than American media. Pretending it isn't shows that you don't have the slightest inkling of what you are talking about.

Funny how outsiders think they know how America is run and how it should be run.

We are an independant country so quit trying to sway our elections. You all bitch about Republicans giving Nadar money? How about all these foreigners giving money to the Democrates, i.e. Perfect example, China and Clinton.

I fail to see how foreign news is more reliable. Fox has been very honest in it's news. They have ripped both parties when needed.

If you want bad new then you want CBS. Extremely obvious in their biased views. I am surprized no one has posted about their blatent attempt to commit fraud against the American public.

/me wonders who made those fake documents?

1. moveon.org?
2. The DNC?
3. The Kerry Camp?

It has to be one of these three. If was anyone else that gave them the documents, they would have given the name of the source and hung them out to dry. But if word got out that any of the three mentioned did it, Kerry would be finished.

Oh one other thing. I am glad we are closing down some of our bases in Europe. Funny how Germany started to cry about its defence and all the money they will be losing.

During the newscasts on the previous election FOX coverage said that Bush had won. This confused the fuck out of all the people who were still counting votes. As for the proof, meh, I can't be arsed digging it up, but all media corporations keep archives of their work so it is provable.

Hydra, don't be a dickhead. There is plenty of evidence of the biased reporting (thanks hydra) of Fox News. The makers of OutFoxed aren't the first to think so either...

Don't just regurgitate the findings of someone else's work by just providing me with a link to some bogus "documentary" called OutFoxed. If there's plenty of evidence, you should be able to show me some yourself.

P.S. Biasness=not a word

EVERYONE here is, in one way or another, regurgitating information from another source (see 3 posts above this one).

I'm not necessarily asking you to read up on the points that OutFoxed makes. Just the fact that an entire documentary has been made and devoted to criticizing Fox's reporting should be some kind of indication that Fox News should be looked at sceptically. People don't just randomly make documentaries for no good reason. Yes Crimson, even Micheal Moore, while cutting and editing to skew information, brought the Bush administration under the microscope for a reason.

Since I'm not going to set up a whole research team to look at statistical data regarding Fox News--what this so called "bogus" doumentary did--I can only show someone so much.

When I sit down and watch Fox News, I am continually disgusted by phrases like "Only 160 days until you can re-elect Bush..." (referring to number of days left before election). Somehow, when I watch CNN or CBS news, that feeling of biased reporting is gone...hmm...

SEALWhen I sit down and watch Fox News, I am continually disgusted by phrases like "Only 160 days until you can re-elect Bush..." (referring to number of days left before election).

That is what Sean Hannity sometimes says when the show "Hannity & Colmes" comes out of a commercial break. He says it really as a joke to Alan Colmes sitting to his left.

"Hannity & Colmes" is an opinion show. Hannity gets paid to express his opinion. It is not his job to report the news; it's his job to comment on it and express his own opinions about the news. He is a news commentator, not a news reporter. That's like saying CNN is biased because James Carville expresses his opinion on Crossfire.

Sean Hannity's opinion is no proof of bias in Fox's reporting.

Quote:Somehow, when I watch CNN or CBS news, that feeling of biased reporting is gone...hmm...

That's because they're biased in more subtle ways.

(That was a joke; I can't be bothered to post proof right now)

Aprime1Don't hijack my topic, kthx.

No, SEAL and I are taking it and running with it, and there's nothing you can do to stop us!!!!

It's more difficult to see bias when it's on your side.

Probably because you're seeing what you want to see, instead of the opposite.

So maybe people that don't think that Fox News is biased are just seeing what they want to see...
It really adds nothing to the argument.

I've had no opinion either way on Fox News, the only time I ever see evidence of bias in their programming is during the "my word" segments or during an opinion debate show like The O'Reilly Factor.
