well, it's not really a school website, it's a website for the kids at school. It cannot be bad though, as the teachers already think of me as evil   :twisted:

Have a friend draw the meanest teachers, and animate them in flash, get some kids to record crappy voices for each teacher, and make cartoons of them. That's what I did.

Hang furniture from the celing, take a picture and hope you don't get expelled. (This apparently happend in my school system, people broke into a school at night and put all the furniture on the celing and then got expelled.)

Last year we had a project like that. I made a page ranting on the principal and it stuck quite nicely, full of witty stories and photoshopped images I had other people make for me (I suck at photoshop)
