That's a nice deficit you got there, America. I wonder how you're going to get rid of it!

Well, the solution is obviously tax cuts. You see, taking money away from the government will take money away from the deficit. It's just that simple.

Well, the solution is obviously more spending on social programs but less spending on national defense. You see, the military is just full of baby-killing murderers, and there is no real threat of terrorism in the world today, so we don't need to spend so much on the services that keep us safe. My bleeding heart can't stand to see another "poor" human being wither away from lack of food stamps, though, so if we help the "poor," we'll help the nation. It's just that simple.

Tax Cut > Money goes to people > Back to government while boosting the economy

Lets follow just one dollar, on this magical journey!

That there Bush feller in the Whitehouse makes one of those tax cuts. Releasing our friend, the dollar. Mr. Dollar is so happy that he is no longer sitting in a stuffy old coffer doing nothing. He's free to do what he does best, progress the economy, and boy he is stoked. So he goes on out to a middle class family, who with their check from "the gov", buy a new computer. Mr. Dollar heads on to Best Buy. He's there for a bit until because of his presence, Best Buy finds itself able to buy another shipment of computers thanks to Dollar and his buddies. You remember Mr. Dollar being stoked right? Cause now Compaq is stoked that they just sold a bunch more computers to Best Buy after receiving Dollar and his traveling partners. Now who has Mr. Dollar touched so far? He's helped the family, he's helped Best Buy, and he's helped Compaq. Let's see where else he goes, shall we? Compaq in the process of their ordinary business realize, "We're low on AMD processors for our 5893i line...". They hop on the phone and order up some shiny new processors from Silicon Valley. How does this transaction occur? Mr. Dollar is on the move again! He's arrived at AMD where business is booming thanks to all the processors sold to build new computers to replace those sold to the retail stores, whose stocks were depleted by families buying computers with their tax savings. AMD is doing so well, they decide to give their workers a raise. Mr. Dollar now heads to the Smith home where he waits a bit in savings. April 15th rolls around, and the Smith's have to pay their taxes. Mr. Dollar to the rescue, they pay their taxes with Mr. Dollar and guess what, He's completed his cyclical journey and has arrived back with the government. Tired from his journey, he heads to a stuffy old coffer, and gets some well deserved rest, before his next big trip into the American Economy.

We salute you, O' hard working dollar. Protectorate of Commerce and Purveyor of Society.

Russia simply cannot let Chechnya go because if they did thousands of little Chechnya's would sprout up in Russia wanting their independence.

Surely, what you meant to say was that they had it coming, because NO ONE DESERVES SUCH A TRAGEDY.

Thanks...

Maybe if CNN had some journalists in Chechenya, you'd agree with me, but unfortunately the Russian federation doesn't want the foreign medias and organisations to go there... Hum, I wonder why? :rolleyes:

You don't know what's going on in Chechenya, unless you've watched the a certain interview on Radio-Canada, they were interviewing a French journalist (I did) that got herself in Chechenya, she was disguised as a Chechen civilian there... I'd suggest you Google-it.

Actually is is not enormous.

It is only 443 billion.

Which is about 4% of our GDP. So in the grand scheme of things it really is not huge.

Now our debt, that is a different story.

When Clinton had a surplus that is one of the worst things you can do. If you need things for your family , but you horde money in the bank. You screw your self over. Bush took that money and gave everyone who paid taxes a nice return. Which stimulated the economy. If 9/11 never happened the economy would be almost perfect.

Good. Sometimes when you add to something it sometimes looks like you're arguing with them even though you agree. Confusing.
