Who do you think won? Any highlights or random thoughts?

My favorite part was when Dick said he couldn't answer in 30 seconds, to which he got the response: Well that's all you're going to get. ...Priceless

I thought it was really wierd when Dick reponded to Edwards, thanking him for his kind words about his family, and then stopped.

As far as who won, I think they were pretty evenly matched. IMO, it was nice to see a republican voice that didn't have to deal with communicating clearly. However, when they got off the topic of Iraq, a lot of their answers seemed to be in conjunction with one another.

Cheney killed Edwards.

Cheney- I have been at the senate meetings almost every Tuesday, and today is the first time I have met you.

There was another one but i forgot it, I'll just wait for the transcript.

Edwards stopped answering the questions 20 minutes in, he kept breaking the rules, and he constantly forgot what the question was.

He is a total idiot.

LOL. He asked what the question was to make the point that Cheney had not really answered the question... I think that went over your head.

The question was about the economy and Cheney spent a good deal of time discussing education, so Edwards said, I'm sorry, what was the question again?

You think Cheney killed Edwards, but do you think all the undecided voters thought so too?

Cheney answered the question by actually saying what will fix it, not making up some plan that will never be explained.

I don't think you know what you're talking about at all. You said this about the first debate, and it made no sense. You said it about this debate, and it doesn't make much sense, either. How did Cheney explain his plans while Edwards did not?

Cheney- We have a plan that goes a little something like this, (rest explains the plan)

Edwards- We have a plan (Never mind most of their plans have been pre-rejected), Bush lied.

Create a post about your plan for the future of this forum without mentioning your candidate's names.

Me and John Kerry have a strong plan for the future of this forum.

"You just said his name"

Oh? Uh, I broke the rule I guess laugh

I was laughing when he kept doing that.

I agree that the debate went largely in Cheyney's favor. Edwards just couldn't connect on the points he connected on. When he talked about healthcare and lawsuits and said because he was a malpractise lawyer he had experience. Then Cheyney fires back that it actually happened to him. He was injured on the job, he had no life insurance.

After viewing this debate though, I'm much more satisfied that Cheyney's the VP. Before this you never know really what he's on about, what he thinks, or what he does, besides his coronarys, strokes, and heart attacks. Now however you get to see him speaking, thinking, and addressing questions in a very adroit fashion.

Twas pretty cool.

The question was about job loss. Cheney said that in order to help people get jobs they wanted to make sure they were more educated. Hence the education reference. It WAS relevant and Edwards was just trying to make him look like an ass.

When Edwards was asked how they expect to get more allies on their side after France and Germany already said that they aren't going to send troops if Kerry gets elected, Edwards NEVER answered the question and went around the answer about allies entirely.

Edwards broke the rules twice in that question, interrupted Cheney at least twice, and ripped a piece of paper while Cheney was talking. Not cool.

The reason Cheney didn't counter-respond is because he and the President do not see eye to eye on the matter of gay marriage. He explained what he believes is not what the president believes, but he stands by the President. Edwards gave he and Kerry's position, Cheney declined to argue it because he wasn't in disagreement.

Definitely not as polar in the winner/loser of last week's debate. But I think Cheney probably came out on top by a narrow to modest margin.

Frankly, Edwards is nothing but a little kid in a big chair, and he just doesn't have the experience or guise at this point to be able to go against Cheney effectively.

Quote:My favorite part was when Dick said he couldn't answer in 30 seconds, to which he got the response: Well that's all you're going to get. ...Priceless

That's just irony. And if you or anyone else doesn't get it, ahem, well, you're probably a moron anyway.

Quote:I thought it was really wierd when Dick reponded to Edwards, thanking him for his kind words about his family, and then stopped.

You might call it a liberal trap on Edward's part. Cheney is fairly public about his views on gay marriage, and those views contrast that of the President. If Cheney said ANYTHING to agree solely with Edwards, it would leave the image that he is working against his partner. He caught onto it right away, and that is a pretty good debating skill on his part.

All in all though:

Besides, Cheney was angrily speaking through his teeth at one point fairly close to the beginning of the debate. That probably set the school boy back into his chair.

I thought the moderator was terrible. Jim Lehrer's the only person who ever really does a good job in his role.

Other than that, I think it was more or less a draw, and I doubt it will matter at all.

And your the ones who think Gore wouldve been a better president. pfft, Moron.

o, and btw the moderator has little to know effect on the outcome of the debate with the exception of questions and rules. So your saying that the questions were too hard or you didnt like her rules?
