Check the pic for 10/7

For those who don't know, Puma Paint is a NASA robot that you can control over the internet. You can control it to pickup, drop, and dip four different color paintbrushes and paint on a paper canvas. Good pictures are saved in the art gallery.

Controlling the robot to get decent results is harder than you would think. I have another pic in the gallery that is actual art, but this time I was just surprised to find a blank paper so in a hurry I scrawled a message. I can't believe it was still unmolested in the morning

www.PumaPaint.rdw.edu/10/07/04 - Blazer Rules

Not sure what "Blazer" is, but he, she or it apparently rules.

LOL.

This is the first I've heard of puma paint. I'm going to fo read around some more , it sounds intresting.

OOoh oooh, I'd really like to try this...but it doesn't appear to be working at the moment.

And I just realized how much I miss the old blue sad face smiley.
