<http://www.johntitor.com/>

If you read that website, all of it, you might come to the chilling realization that the guy who wrote all of those quotes was really from the future, and did see events on his world line appear in the way he's telling them.

For example:

Quote:There is a civil war in the United States that starts in 2005. That conflict flares up and down for 10 years. In 2015, Russia launches a nuclear strike against the major cities in the United States (which is the "other side" of the civil war from my perspective), China and Europe. The United States counter attacks. The US cities are destroyed along with the AFE (American Federal Empire)...thus we (in the country) won. The European Union and China were also destroyed. Russia is now our largest trading partner and the Capitol of the US was moved to Omaha Nebraska.

I doubt the nuclear strike would happen. The civil war, however, seems to be highly likely considering the way politics are unfolding today.

Quote:I believe that hardship and challenge develop character and community. My first experience with war came when I joined a shotgun infantry unit at the age of thirteen. In the 4 years I served as a "rebel", I watched hundreds of people get shot, burn and bleed to death. I know exactly where I was and every detail of the exact moment the first nuclear warheads began falling on Jacksonville. I know the pain and regret of not acting soon enough to enjoy a relationship as a loved one dies of brain cancer from a war that gained nothing.

How can you possibly criticize me for any conflict that comes to you? I watch every day what you are doing as a society. While you sit by and watch your Constitution being torn away from you, you willfully eat poisoned food, buy manufactured products no one needs and turn an uncaring eye away from millions of people suffering and dying all around you. Is this the "Universal Law" you subscribe to?

Perhaps I should let you all in on a little secret. No one likes you in the future. This time period is looked at as being full of lazy, self-centered, civically ignorant sheep. Perhaps you should be less concerned about me and more concerned about that.

I just find an odd resemblance between his words and my own. Maybe that's just me though.

Quote:Why are you so interested in the Constitution?

After the war, the United States had split into five separate regions based on the various factors and military objectives they each had. There was a great deal of anger directed toward the Federal government and a revival of states rights was becoming paramount. However, in their attempt to create an economic form of government, the political and military leaders at the time decided to hold one last Constitutional Congress in order to present a psychological cohesion from the old system.

During this Congress, the leaders discovered and decided that coming up with a new and better form of government was nearly impossible. The original Constitution itself was not the problem it was the ignorance of the people that lived under it.

Quote:I disapprove of war because I think it's immoral. What do you think?

I disapprove of murder. Man as a species is incapable of changing his nature through will alone and war is a tool of biology. The ability for war sleeps in each one of us and we must decide what we will do before the beast awakens. As for morality, again I point to the "universal" balance of good and evil. For every worldline where there is peace, there is a worldline that has destroyed itself.

(4) I'm glad to see it's so easy for to dismiss the Middle East. Yes, I suppose it is a no brainer but pretty soon it will be a "no armer" and a "no legger".

The year 2008 was a general date by which time everyone will realize the world they thought they were living in was over. The civil war in the United States will start in 2004. I would describe it as having a Waco type event every month that steadily gets worse. The conflict will consume everyone in the US by 2012 and end in 2015 with a very short WWIII.

Bullshit or not, this guy has a lot of good opinions on how this nation is going right now.

I don't think so. It's already October and there have been no "Waco type" events. I looked through a nice chunk of this site previously and I really can't agree with or believe any of this. I'll believe it when I see it.

It's still 2004, and who's to say this won't happen if John Kerry is elected? Or if Bush changes his policies completely due to terrorist attacks that destroy New York City with a nuclear device, causing him to begin sending law enforcement at our own citizens for undue searches?

Ok, that could be possible, but if it were to occur then it would be the second time that part of the U.S. Constitution would be violated. You cannot use military technology against American citizens. They might stick to that, but they might not if a terror attack occurs on a scale that large.

But the parts about the "American Federal Empire" and the U.S. splitting into 5 separate regions is too far fetched for me to agree with. This civil war he talks about would have to be an almost full scale war for the U.S. to split up that badly.

Maybe his memory isn't that good anymore

I had also seen this site several months ago and decided to just wait for the civil war..
Anyways, I guess time will tell if this is just a bunch of BS or not.

Quote:John says the civil war leads to the world war in 2015. The civil war lasts for ten years?

It's 2004. I apologize for a missed key (very observant - we all need good critics). Perhaps our definition of war is different. I would define it as a conflict where organized groups engage in maneuver and armed conflict. The first U.S. civil war lasted 4 years and the English civil war lasted 6. How long is too long?

<http://www.johntitor.com/JohnsWorld.htm>

That explains why what he wrote may not happen at all.

Remember people, it's not bullshit until you can prove it to be that. Looking at it from a skeptical perspective, it doesn't seem likely because it probably hasn't happened often in our time. But that still doesn't mean it didn't happen.

A lot of this stuff just dosen't make any sense. I already don't believe that any of this is true, and some of the responses he gives from the qestions he's asked just reinforces my disbelief. One example is that he responds with things like, "I don't know. I won't discuss this" or "I don't know what your facination with this [person/place/thing] is, but I will not discuss it". He acts as if he's alien to everything around him even though he was born in 1998 and is currently (in our time) six years old.

I also took into consideration that The Rapture may have occured, but he made no mention of anything like that. No major car/plane wrecks, no people dissapearing, not a single thing. I think if The Rapture did occur he would have made some remark on it, but he made no mention of anything of the sort.

I'll also mention one more time that he said a Waco type event will occur every month in the year 2004. I know it's still in the year 2004, but it's already been 9 months and there hasn't been a single "Waco" type event.

I'm just giving you some of my reasons why I think this is fake, I'm not trying to prove this false. But until I see the White House up in flames I'm going to say that this is all fake.

Quote:Does anything happen in the year 2012? I've heard stories about the world ending.

In my 2012, I was 14 years old spending most of my time living, running and hiding in the woods and rivers of central Florida. The civil war was in its 7th year and the world war was three years away. Yes, there are unusual events in 2012 but they do not cause the world to end.

Unfortunately, I have decided not to discuss events that you or I can do anything about. It is important that they be a surprise. Perhaps you are familiar with the story of the Red Sea and the Egyptians?

You apparently didn't read much into it. He doesn't act alien to everything because he explains a lot of things in-depth. Being a traveler in time doesn't mean you're going to be a nuclear physicist. As he said, being an airline pilot doesn't mean you're an aeronautical engineer. He's not going to know everything especially since this time is about 2% different from where he originates.
