No, CS:S is a game that comes with HL2 if you buy the package containing it.

I just got the holy grail of CS:S. Three stabs in a row.

Jupiter Knight killed newb? with knife.
Jupiter Knight killed Crazy_Arafat with knife.
Jupiter Knight killed ampleforth with knife.

This was the FIRST round for the map (for me). Got 11 kills.

A few deaths..

More kills +1 more death

More kills / deaths

End score. Not bad considering I missed the first 20minutes of the map.

Silent_Kane, Scythar, [Da]Chey were also in there (slap me if I forgot someone.. was a big server..)

Matt..

j_ball430Steam accounts are free.

Yea the account itself is, but is steam the only way you can "buy" it? I haven't seen it in shops... Unless they are sold out lol. (i keep seeing that steam thing everywhere so that's why i'm thinking that...)

I tried to download the demo... but... it's so big it takes 300 MINUTES to get it.

So that's a big no then. So unless you can buy it anywhere i will not be trying it, or upgrade my pc...

i reccomend downloading the demo while you wait, its pretty fun. I own RavenHolm with my Grav Gun

And Im a noob to CS, so is it just when u die, u wait for the end of the game, or do you get respawn? I notice there is money to buy guns or different weapons, how to you get money and how do they have it set up so you can buy things(ex: Renegade has PTs, wut does CS have?)

If you die, you have to wait until your team wins/loses either by killing each other or successfully performing your objective. Your objectives are determined by what team you are on. Some maps, if you are a Counter-Terrorist, you have to rescue hostages (ie. Office). Other maps, if you are a Terrorist, you have to plant a bomb and have it explode (ie. Dust).

You have to have money in order to buy your weapons. You generally start off with $800. That limits the game to a pistol round. If your team wins, you get more money, if your team loses, you still get some. If you kill someone, you get $350 for each kill. Your money is limited to $16,000.

1pt per kill, 3 for disarming or successfully planting a bomb, and you get extra for rescuing hostages as well. You lose 1pt for getting killed by a bomb, and depending on the server you may lose points for killing hostages too.

Kills: Me < Everyone

damn...

Just because I don't kill anyone doesn't mean I'm useless, I'm the support guy.

Wow, I just killed three people in one round, I made a song for it!

I shot three people in the head,
Now they are hopefully dead,

I played about 6 hours yesterday, 2 the day before, and I still suck. I can't keep a positive ratio. I also hate how I can have a person at point blank distance with their head in my crosshairs, start unloading on them, and not even land a shot. Then I go and see a person with their crosshairs 3 CM to the left of someone unload and clear out a room.

CS is not a n00b game like Renegade were you get good after one day of playing. It has things you have to get used to before you can even begin to start getting leet, you must adjust to the gameplay for one, which is different from any other game out there, the maps are finley detailed and not small go this way or this way and BANG the enemey WILL be there as in Ren, the recoil of guns and the amount of guns that are going to be used against you.

It'll take a while, i sucked for about the first month and i was baout ready to stop playing back when i started 3 years ago, then something clicked and i just got ithe hang of it

No. That's too one dimensional, and that will make you suck even more. You need to be able to be versitile. Trust me. I tried to get good with the deagle, but I kept getting worse and worse. I started using different weapons, and I've been doing better. I'm not saying that you can't use one gun more than another, but just don't limit yourself to one gun.

If you are talking about getting the ingame console for Half-Life 2, you go to Options then Keystrokes, click on the advanced menu and there should be a option for fast weapon switching and enabling the console.

Not sure if that works for Counter-Strike: Source. It probably will seeing as I don't see why it wouldn't.

Armor is practically useless. The chances of the armor actually saving your life in any situation is low. You're better off getting a deagle, secondary ammo, and pick up a primary. That's what I've done.

Because it isn't actually "armor." It's kevlar, and like it would in real life, only protects the areas that the vest actually cover on your body

It's also nearly useless against Rifles. It might weaken a scout, clarion, or defender shot, but anything higher than that and you're done. It work pretty good against SMGs and pistols though. Providing they still hit you in the vest, and not the head..

Ive been playing quite a bit and I find this an issue aswell.

there is some tweaks to get more packet updates sent and received(although a few of you dont seem to need it )

Im going thru some testing right now with cl_updaterate and cl_cmdrate etc..

I'll post a good configuration once I have one.

But as you will see thru the 20 pages of that topic (yes I read it all) Source's netcode is pretty bad....Infact I believe worse then Renegades.

I can only hope Dead 6 won't run into this problem, Seeing this was the main reason I purchased HL2.

By time Dead 6 reaches a final stage Lets hope Valve fixes this.

Quote:Infact I believe worse then Renegades.

You're an idiot. There are few games that have latency issues worse than Renegade. CS:S and HL2 are not among them. If you have anything above a ping of 150, you're going to get murdered by people with pings of 1-149. Why? Because in Renegade, the network code was so horrible that everyone nearly had the same ping, around 115 if their connection was good. In CS:S, you aren't stuck at the same rate and weapons aren't calculated client side, so start learning how to play or you can keep complaining.

I actually like the whole stunned effect when you were shot. When it first happened to me I thought it was fantastic realism. It wasn't too much that I couldn't do anything, so I thought it was really neat. If it's actually a netcode issue then, oh well.

lol...it amazes me how you can call me an idiot when you have no idea what you're talking about.

cl_interp command helps 56k'rs with a ping of 300 play just aswell as someone with a ping of 30...which alot of people are pissed that the netcode was built with 56k'rs in mind.

Im not going into detail here but, The client and server predict where you were standing. Most games use this, but CS:S is only limited to 33-35 packets per second....which needs to be fixed. Packets are being lost or not sent and it's causing the model to lag behind visually to the client...Trust me aim ahead of the direction they are moving and you'll see a big difference in your shots landed.

It'd just be nice for a game with such "realism" to have you hit what you are seeing.

Maybe you should read some of that topic.

in Renegade this aspect was even more stable on hitting dead-on.

It doesnt matter now anyways, I have set up an autoexec.cfg with some settings that improve on the default ones and I find my shots landing alot more often.

Quote:I actually like the whole stunned effect when you were shot. When it first happened to me I thought it was fantastic realism. It wasn't too much that I couldn't do anything, so I thought it was really neat. If it's actually a netcode issue then, oh well.

The stun effect is normal, Im talking about when your bullets arent registering hits on the players hitboxes.

You don't need a command, if you have a 56 KPBS modem you can still get a decent ping without using the console. Idiot.

CS:S is not realistic.

Renegade sucks. The only reason you hit dead on in that game is because you didn't need very much skill to kill anyone in it. There is no recoil and there is little weapon inaccuracy.

The bullets hit if you know how to fire the weapon you're using. Since you don't, you whine, because you suck.

The command is a default, Dumbass...which happens to help 56 KBPS modem users.

Im not here to discuss my skill (so what if im not good yet) or compare the 2 games, Im just letting a few people know they can adjust there settings to get the most out of there connection....since the default try to cover 56K users aswell.

I let a few people know a possible fix/help and you get on my ass about "dont whine cuz you sux"

So why dont you just relax.

DJM, the server names are <http://www.n00bstories.com> and RenEvo Dedicated 1. The server IPs are what I gave earlier. To connect by server IP (gets rid of the hassle of finding the server via list), you need to enable your console.

To enable your console, you need to open the game and go to options. Then click the Keyboard tab. Once you're there, go to the bottom where it says Advanced. Click that and a small dialog box will pop up. When it pops up, the enable console option (second option) should be unchecked, and if it is, mark the checkbox and then press okay. Then press okay out of the Options dialog box.

To get to your console, simply press ~ (this works anywhere in the game. Even when you're typing a message ingame). Once you enable the console, it will stay enabled until you disable it. Once you have opened the console, type connect ip. That should connect you to the server.

Also, don't forget to check out 65.75.176.112:27015.

Yeah, but that adds server upon server to the favorites. Of course you can delete them, but why not just not even have to worry about it? Plus, enabling the console is beneficial in other ways.

Three servers I HIGHLY recommend you put in your favorites list:

Digital-Depiction Server 1 (65.75.176.112:27015) <-- This one especially RenEvo Dedicated 1 (64.5.42.175:20176)
