Screenshots: F5

Here's the cool thing, a saw blade tornado!

Okay, take a body (I used what's his face, the evil scientist) and take the manipulator and lift him up high, and press the right mouse button to lock him in place.

Take the crossbow, and use the rope. Attatch the rope to him then aim up high and shoot to the sky.

Take out the manipulator and press reload, his body will fall, and if done correctly, hang on the string (rope).

If his body is a fair way off the ground and only suspended by the rope (you can tell, he'll swing around quite a bit, if he's lower he'll make a crowbar pinyata) and then take out your shotgun.

Using the right mouse button, select sawblade.

Attatch the sawblades to him, and walk around him. Only fire 4-5. If his body starts magically jerking like a druggie on crack, take out the crossbow and press reload to watch his body twist, and if not careful, cut you up.

If after putting 4-5 sawblades on his body and he doesn't start jerking around, redo it all.

Also it took me a game or two to figure this out, the shotgun wheels should be on 0 when you make them because when you change the value it effects already placed tires. I was freezing the dumpster and putting 15 wheels on it to get it to drive forward then unfreezing it. Then I figured out that you can put them all on at 0 then crank it up and actually drive it around. I always put a canister on the back so I can run behind it and steer using that and I can make a pilotable car. (Steering using walking into the cannister and pushing the rear of the car left or right)

I thought I read it somewhere on their site on the updates, I'll let you know if I find it, otherwise I admit defeat and that your right.

EDIT: I remember where I saw it, it was in their forums, but I'll never find the topic Quote: 20) I'm having blur problems in v4.

This is likely because of:

A) Your video card doesn't support DX9

B) You havent set HL2 to use DX9

To fix A, well, go buy a new card. B is easier to fix.

Code:

mat_dxlevel <level>

This cvar changes your Direct X level and can be changed at any time. Note that if your card doesn't support DX9, and you try to force it, it will revert to DX6. To fix this, type mat_dxlevel 81 in your console to change it back to good old 8.1.

YOU WIN! Don't shoot me!

2x barely makes any difference and it slows me down greatly. I only have a 256mb video card.

Also, keep in mind that even though Garry's Mod uses Half-Life 2, it does not keep your settings. Meaning, on default everything will be on medium graphics and you may not notice that, which is probably why most everyone's screenshots are ugly. And trust me, I know what the camera effect looks like and I can tell the difference.

For some reason, the top one came out at a weird resolution. I took both of those screens while running on DX9 High. I had AA at 6x or 4x, same for AF, and the resolution I was running was 1024x768. It didn't put the blur filter on.

And I grab her arm and try to just put it out in front of her, but her arm twists over and now her elbows facing the wrong way. I continue anyhow and try to put a gun in her hand but as soon as I grab her hand it goes instantly straight down and wont move. I'm like what in the hell! Then I grab her leg and try to make her look like shes jumping, but she swivels on her origin bone and how shes "hanging" from her hand and her leg just like retarded.
