Givin his position in the world, it WAS a poor choice of a costume. (Like it or not, when you're in the line for the throne of a country, there is a certain way you MUST act). However, I do agree. People seem to be blowing this way beyond anything resembling proportion.

I find the British Tabloid Press amusing at best, godawful at worst. This is a case of godawful.

An editor of another downmarket rag, let's call it the Daily Express, did worse than wear an armband. He shouted at his German financiers that they were "all fucking nazis" and that they should "go back to the mothercountry and go kill some more Jews". He then did an apparently loving version of Deutschland Uber Alles while doing the John Cleese Fawlty Towers walk around the office.

But I guess you won't have heard about that, knowing the Tabloid press :rolleyes:

Harry has done nothing wrong there, it's just The Sun and its ever increasing need to get more people to read it.

He didn't just wear a costume. He went to a costume party in a god damn nazi uniforme , thats wrong and ill minded enough already, but it gets better. HE'S THE THIRD IN LINE TO THE THRONE as you all know, so lets think here for a minute but don't you guys think to hard don't want any blood comin out your nose or anything.

IF I WAS THE PRINCE , AND REPRESENTED THE ROYAL FAMILY OF BRITIAN , AND KNEW THE PRESS WOULD BE WATCHING ME AFTER ALL OF THE OTHER DISCRASE I HAVE BROUGHT UPON MY FAMILY, WHAT WOULD I WEAR TO A COSTUME PARTY.

O ya, not a nazi uniform.

In this case he is right though (wow, did I just say cowmisfit was right about something?). Public figures are heald to a different standard than the rest of the universe. The Clinton impeachment is one example, this is another, and I'm sure if Bush was caught wearing a turban, people would make similar comments as well. Different people, different standards. For better or for worse, thats the life of a public figure. (I wonder what would happen if Bill Gates was caught using somthing OTHER than a windows OS on his computer).

It was a private party. What he does in private is none of our concern, and furthermore saying he can't dress up as whoever he wants is just as "closed minded" (Goddess I hate that phrase, it's so overused by ignorant people) as you accuse the person dressing up as being.

Now if he's actually doing things that are sympathetic with the National Socialist movement back in the 1930s, I could definitely understand the outrage.

Liberate your mind

You motherfucker, you're so narrow-minded
So narrow-minded
Liberate your mind
Now motherfucker, will you liberate your mind
This time

Bold motherfucker
Don't limit your mind
Can;t you see that the pace
Has fallen behind
All the hate in your heart
Will be leaving you blind
So bold motherfucker
Don't you limit your mind
This time

Waiting, for your modern messiah
To take away all the hatred
That darkens the light in your eye
Still awaiting. i

Out of zion shall come forth a law
And the word of the lord from jerusalem
Nation shall not raise sword against nation
And they shall not learn war anymore
For the mouth of the lord hath spoken

Waiting, for your modern messiah
To take away all the hatred
That darkens the light in your eye
Still awaiting

Ignorance +50

Your point and opinions are wrong. They are human just as the rest of us are, and no one is infallible. If you're unable to live without direction from someone like that, go dress up in your National Socialist costume and be quiet.
