Interesting... because thats exactly what people thought prior to 9/11. The idea of someone being able to attack America was so absured, it must not be true.

No, see, that's just ignorance. Nobody's safe from attacks/crime even if you live in the safest cities in the world. We especially know this now because of 9/11.

I've been trying to look at that from a miliary point of view, and it's just way beyond anything logical. Plus, it wouldn't work. I wouldn't give a damn how hot a chick was if she's the enemy that we're fighting. Especially if she's putting me in danger of my own life. I'm gonna shoot the bitch.

Plus, if the gas made my enemy irresistable sexually, I'd know about it. Even if I'd actually feel attracted to the enemy, I'd realize that I'm not supposed to think that way, and that it was a ploy by the enemy, and that would piss me off more.

In order for the bomb to work, you'd have to alter one's line of thinking beyond their sexual orientation into tricking them that they're truly homosexual. If you don't then they're going to realize that it's a trick by the enemy. If I am all of a sudden attracted to my enemy, I'm going to know that it's a ploy by them because just a few minutes/hours before, I was fantasizing about women. They'd have to somehow trick your brain into thinking that this is your normal. If you do this, then why make them homosexual? Why not just erase their memory temporarily? They'd pretty much have to do that already and then on top of that add a chemical agent that turns them into homosexuals.

It's not ignorance. Think of the point I'm trying to bring across. Just because it's absurd, does not mean it's false. Heck, most major technological developments were done through people doing things that were considered absurd.

Regardless, "In development" means just that. They are doing the research to make the weapons. It doesn't necessarily mean that the weapons are in production, nor does it say that they will ever come into existence.

As for that "beyond the logical" argument. Go out and learn something about pheromones. Given a strong enough agent, the chemical will be able to affect you. If not long enough for you to act on it, long enough to stall your actions while you clear your head. It's simple biochemistry, and already used to some extent in the private market.

So America is ridiculous because they pay some people to think outside the box and think of new and innovative ways to battle their enemies? I don't know why "America" becomes "ridiculous" because a couple paid brains up at the Pentagon talked about a "homo bomb" idea. Love makes people do crazy things, even kill... so why not explore harnessing that emotion and manipulate it for our own purposes? But then again, the Democrats would have probably found a way to equate it to "severe mental anguish" aka torture. :rolleyes:

No, you see, you're reading it wrong:

Quote:The US military investigated building a "gay bomb", which would make enemy soldiers "sexually irresistible" to each other, government papers say.

Not as in:

-OMG! I CAN'T SHOOT THAT G.I HE'S TOO DAMN SEXY!

But as in:

-Bobby, Nick and Johnny were working on setting up that Russian spy-thing to spy on the U.S troops.

-Bomb goes boom.

-Bobby starts checking Nick out.

-Nick says, "Bobby, what're you doing man we gotta set thi- hey did anybody ever tell you how good you look in that uniform?"

-They never finish setting up the spy-thing because of being busy jackhammering each other's bungholes.

x = Whatever we say

It may have been for comedy purposes, but it's not far from the truth. 9/11 became a turning point for the US Administration to start "The War on Terror". In my personal view, the ignorance is on those who thought it was "to liberate the people of Iraq". Wars are made for political GAIN, not to spend millions of dollars to go and help out third-world countries. Otherwise we would be making efforts in places like Africa and helping there, but that's not really being done much.

No, he's right. The BBC hates America.

It's true. Know what, tomorrow, there's a documentary on how Bush is burning babies alive, and after that, some reporters from the BBC are going to go to the White House and... burn flags!
:rolleyes:

I've watched the BBC for many, many years, and as far as their news is concerned....

You're gonna have a hell of a time searching for something anti-anything when you get around to stopping being someone who seems to have a shitload of opinions, just incredibly little (or in some cases, no) evidence to back it up, and is unwilling to even go and look because "BBC is bad".

Puh-lease.

EDIT: I don't get it, why does everyone get all offended when someone claims that America is making a "gay bomb?" I don't find it offensive, heck, I have no feelings about it whatsoever. It's a great idea IMHO.

I think it's hilarious

The point seems to have devolved into a discussion about whether or not this is actually real. The BBC slash Reuters slash whichever other one was mentioned have no reason to go making up stories about things like this. As far as I can see, they're declassified documents and exist. I certainly haven't seen anything by the US Government denying this....

i cant believe something so incredibly absurd has made it to three pages of posts.

Three things to consider here:

Why would we want to use chem weapons if that is what we are fighting to rid Iraq of?

1 Our soldiers wouldnt be protected from these weapons

2 Chemicals like such wont make you insane, you will still realize that there is something wrong and you wont do anything homosexual.

3 geez let this dumb thread die.

j_ball430JavaxcxWhile this story sounds pretty ridiculous, but none of you have refuted it. Just reading the article refutes it. It's so ridiculous that anyone with the least amount of common sense realize that, and that's to say a lot.

Then you didn't read it. The plans were dug out of the USAF's own laboratories. The US government does not just say "hey lol lets us guys plant teh funney storiez on teh media so people will believes it," this shit happened.

It may be ridiculous, but in war, making enemies more concerned with butt fucking each other instead of fighting you is a great, non-lethal way to eliminate enemy soldiers without firing a shot. Simply capture them and release them once the war is over.

O and when did i say that they don't like america because bbc said so? J_ball agree's with me as well, and im sure some others around here would too. Its not some "radical opinon" that some of you seem to think i have of the world, its a fact. Don't be blind.

OK, well speaking as a person who watches BBC news broadcasting on a more-or-less daily basis, and occasionally having the radio at work too, I can say for a fact that's bullshit.

But I'm sure, being non-British and maybe having about as much knowledge of the BBC as your average fish has of nuclear physics, I'm sure you're the authority here.

:rolleyes: Your view on the matter doesn't matter because your not an American, you wouldn't see them as bashing our president and war on terror because your against both as well it seems, so its not that hard to understand why you would watch it and have a different view than I.

While this is true, you may as well have said it. Having an opinion that doesn't matter is something leagues different from having one you don't care about, misfit.

Why doesn't your opinion matter if you're not American? I think I've thrown 1984 at you once, I'll do it again.

However, following this logic, you're not Iraqi, don't have an opinion on their doings.

You're not English, stop telling us what you'd do with our Prince.

Gbull I agree. We are the Red Herring and the rest of the world likes to play little Freddy Jones from Scooby Doo Kids.

I have to say I was completely taken off guard as I watched several channels some time after the Tsunami hit interviewing people from various embassys blaming the US for not giving warning about the Tsunami. I could not beleive this, we were being blamed for a natural disaster or "Act of god" (If I can say that without being jumped all over...) Come on! Jeesh!

It's funny though, everybody keeps a record on the US. They never forget. I've talked to people from all around the world and if we get onto the topic of politics they have some little thing. I haven't got anything on Lesotho but I damn well bet they have something on me.

"You Americans left a Lesothoan hostage in a English prison for 6 months before he was released! DOGS!!1!!!!"

Every other country out there has got some little thing. We can forgive and forget. I know in the 60's we loved our VW Beetles and that was a car DESIGNED by Hitler. Who makes all our electronics? The evil empire of Japan.

I know people are going to pick this apart and end up deducing that I'm Bob Saget's Cousin but, All I can do is state my mind and no one elses.

Javalcx=[DT=gbull=[L]=]Dont try to change us, because we aren't trying to change you, we are just fixing some injustices you other countries refuse to.

Your country is on the forefront of changing the sovereignty of a nation illegally too. .

Sure Saddam has killed thousands of his own people in the most horrid ways imaginable, and yea he beat and raped thousands of people for no reason, AND O YA THOUSANDS of kids don't have a mommy, daddy or one of their friends anymore, or maybe even their own lives, and SURE he may have used chemical weapons on his own people and threatened to use them on us.

But o ya , were doing something wrong.

That isn't the issue, you moron. The issue is that the act was illegal. Moreso, your nation seems to be avoiding any responsibility on that note. Morality and legality are two completely separate issues here. On the one hand, helping those in disregard of legality is one thing (and may be the only thing you and I agree on), but the act is still wrong if despite the rightness of the consequences, no responsibility regarding the legal consequences is taken. THAT is cowardice.

Quote:Your just like the BBC, you throw in inreletive attacks at me, moron.
(Inreletive. XD)

Oh, so you've FOUND something showing the BBC has done this.
Well?

Quote:You do not like the war, not because of the morality of it, but because you follow the law by the book

So, by your understanding here, anyone who follows the law is a fool, since anyone who follow the law... well, that never gets things done, does it.
I bet you don't even care about all those people in Cuba who have still never been proved of doing anything wrong. Thanks to the US Governments (say, there's a pattern here) side-stepping of Human rights, law, amendments, blah blah blah, you've worked yourself into quite a situation.

You release them, they'll have you in front of a court faster than you can say Guantanamo Bay (sp). You don't release them, this'll dog you for ages.

I pray that American people don't start blowing things up like they alledgedly did, or when the time comes to "release" American detainees, the world will turn around and very politely tell them to fuck off.

Wait a sec, I've been a blind fool.

Quote:You do not like the war, not because of the morality of it, but because you follow the law by the book

So, the war was ok because you were morally right to go in, and damned be the consequences. Let's sidestep the law on this occasion, but the next time someone stabs me, well. I'll just claim all my rights now, eh. (Pattern's back). Haven't you just admited that the war was illegal now? Asking us whether we follow the rule of law and then telling us that that is the main reason we hate the war is only going to support our side.

Why the hell is Java spending so much time on this when you are perfectly capable of disproving anything you say so EASILY.

j_ball430DeathgodxC4pRoXDeathgodSpoonyLet me get this straight, Cowmisfit.

Because you're American and I'm British, my opinion regarding the US President (which I don't think I've even expressed, but that's besides the point) is worthless compared to yours.

Because you're American and I'm British, my opinion regarding the BRITISH Broadcasting Corporation is worthless compared to yours.

I hate America for this reason.

Not all of us are like that . Just a little bit over half of the country is...

But it happens to be the half in power, so the rest of us suffer for it.

Funny. You can't include me in that ignorance group, so don't even try. I'm a Conservative and proud of it. Just because Eminem and Michael Moore side with you doesn't make you better, in fact, I laugh at those two supporting your side. I sure as hell wouldn't want those two with me.

So because I dislike Bush means I support those two jerkoffs? Wrong. Don't jump to conclusions you can't support. I don't believe in much of anything political, personally... everyone in politics only wants your support as far as it furthers their own agenda. Rare is the politician who is looking out for the good of society, and even then it is impossible to please everyone. The whole idea is futile.

You are the close-minded fool I am referring to. CONGRATURATION!! A WINNER IS YOU!!!

I am planning to leave, believe me. I've been planning it ever since I was in middle school, but there are things I have to take advantage of first. It's not as easy as just up and leaving, either. That's the kind of statement that is easy to throw at someone but is quite difficult for them to actually follow through on. For example, there are fairly lengthy immigration processes to follow through if one is leaving for another country, no matter where you go, and I want to get a degree and more work experience under my belt to make me better equipped to meet those requirements.

As for your post, if I am a pathetic excuse for an American, I suppose you fit the bill, with your poor grammar and bigotry. If that's what it takes to fit in here, I'm glad I fail at it. That means I am succeeding at life.

This place is going down the tubes, and I fully expect I will see America as we know it fall within my lifetime. It'll probably be the best thing that happened to the rest of the world since WW2.

That'd go with your view of the rest of the world hating America, right? God knows I need to lower myself to your level to start even grabbing your attention.

Cowmisfit, you have been asked about 20 times now to:

Take your finger out your ass and find proof that the BBC is doing what you are saying it does and 'hates Americasville'".

If you can't even back this up, something which you are just spouting off at the mouth (Say, didn't you JUST say you don't like people who do that?), something which you keep going back to a la one of your posts I quoted, about how someone was "Just like the BBC, Attacking America not the issue".

How the fuck can you even think your stances in this thread are justified when all you do is spout off opinions without backing them up.

And that's the whole point of this, isn't it? Not the Gay Bomb (Which presumably people would have been able to detect with their Gaydars), just you being a foul-mouthed walking biohazard.

DeathgodxC4pRoXDeathgodSpoonyLet me get this straight, Cowmisfit.

Because you're American and I'm British, my opinion regarding the US President (which I don't think I've even expressed, but that's besides the point) is worthless compared to yours.

Because you're American and I'm British, my opinion regarding the BRITISH Broadcasting Corporation is worthless compared to yours.

I hate America for this reason.

Not all of us are like that . Just a little bit over half of the country is...

But it happens to be the half in power, so the rest of us suffer for it.

Yes, you're right, ALL conservatives feel the same way about foreigners. If you can generalize that much, you ARE exceedingly thick. I also invite you to get the fuck out of the country. People like you make me want to vomit. Might I suggest Mexico? A lot of Americans are moving there, some even sneak over the border to get there. (or is it the other way around? I forget...)

SpoonyYou may as well say, if you hate the rest of the world so much, just bomb the fuck out of it.

Oh wait... you are, aren't you? :rolleyes:

Yep, you're right. Afghanistan and Iraq is the WHOLE WORLD. Good job!

I'm seeing excessive idiocy in this thread from many people, right and left.

I unraveled this legality snafu anyway... Breach of Contract between nations would fall under International Law, i.e. the International Court in the Hague. The US declined to recognize the international court as a valid law making authority. QED. It's the same as the fact that we can't go arrest someone in Canada for selling weed.

I would consider a bomb that makes the skin super sensitive to sunlight an act of terrorism. That's just not right... It gives me the heebie jeebies thinking about it. I've been sunburned really bad many times in my life and its about the worst thing... Blow them the fuck up but don't intentionally sunburn them... So horrible... (Yes I know the atomic bomb sunburned people when it was dropped on Japan and that's a very negative side effect however at least it wasn't intentionally designed to do that)

Oh yes, I, the leader of FUD, am definitely looking for approval from people. That's a righteously amusing statement, Crimson. I have made public my disdain for pretty much everyone and everything many times over. Unlike most other people in the world, I don't need the approval of others to make myself feel like I belong or that I am a successful person. I don't really care what anyone else thinks. If they happen to agree with me, great. If not, whatever.

It's not an attitude, it is actually how I feel. I feel that this country has gotten to a place of power and feels that it is owed current respect for its past deeds, and that it can do whatever it wants around the world because 'we're America, if you don't like it fuck you, the bombs are coming.' I'm sorry, but if I knew a person with that attitude I would kick their ass, and I expect no less out of a country. Just because we're on top doesn't mean that A) we are entitled to stay there just because of prior process, and B) we can stomp all over everyone else to keep them down. If this country was really concerned with "freedom around the world" and "liberty" and other such lofty ideals, it wouldn't be run by money-grubbing powermongers, and we wouldn't need to have the inauguration covered by more weapons than we spent in the first Iraq War.

As for being wise beyond my years, I like to think I am, and that feeling is reinforced every day when I look around at the people I am forced to associate with in this society. Most people are completely unaware of the world at large and only do/know what they are told. I, on the other hand, like to have a somewhat informed opinion about things and go out of my way to achieve this. You can think what you want about that being self-righteous, but the fact of the matter is I am pretty sure I am better than the average person. That doesn't mean I hold them in contempt or disdain, though. I am a macro-altruist, really, but most people wouldn't understand it.

Thanks for proving me right 100%. First off, I never said you want everyone's approval. I said you wanted them to think you're "cool". Funny enough, that's the reason many people smoke cigarettes or worse, or other self-destructive behavior.

Yeah, you think you're better than the average person, yes, you're right. Unfortunately, I bet 80% of people, maybe more, think the same thing about themselves. And of course it IS healthy to have a positive self image.

Also, let me reiterate something funny.

Quote:I have made public my disdain for pretty much everyone and everything many times over.

Quote:You can think what you want about that being self-righteous, but the fact of the matter is I am pretty sure I am better than the average person. That doesn't mean I hold them in contempt or disdain, though.

Was this a backpedal, or do you not know how you really feel? Should you have said "I have ... disdain for everyone and everything, except the average person."? Do you have disdain for everyone who's above or below average, but not the average ones? Including yourself? I'm really confused.

I'm also pretty sure that we had more than two missile-equipped humvees and a couple F-16's in Iraq... are we assholes for protecting our Commander in Chief? One of the few times our Pres and VP are in the same location and we're not supposed to protect their lives?

So, tell me, which country do you find so much better than the US that you are going to relocate to, and why?

It's not unfortunate, people should think they are good. If not, you end up in the gutter. Your attitude determines a lot of your behavior and where you will end up in life.

Was this a backpedal, or do you not know how you really feel? Should you have said "I have ... disdain for everyone and everything, except the average person."? Do you have disdain for everyone who's above or below average, but not the average ones? Including yourself? I'm really confused.

What I mean is that I don't hold them in disdain because I think I am better, I hold them in disdain because of the fact that I think they are worse. There's a difference. I don't generally have an opinion about someone, good or bad, until I see them make an action I approve or disprove of. Thus, the great majority of the world's people will never have judgment passed on them by me, since I will probably never know them. I can still make generalizations like everyone else though.

They shouldn't NEED to be protected... You never saw cities being locked down for prior inaugurations.

Crimson

So, tell me, which country do you find so much better than the US that you are going to relocate to, and why?

I'm not sure yet, I am trying to weigh whether moving anywhere else would be a step up or not. If I can get more positive benefit than negative, I will. Right now, I'd like to check out some of Western Europe, Australia, New Zealand, or Japan perhaps. Canada is not out of the question I suppose, but it is too damn cold there.

Getting back to the discussion at hand... I take it back, I don't doubt that these things could have been thought through as potential weapons. The US Government has tried some pretty interesting things that actually did make it out of the concept phase but never into practical use as weapons. This one obviously never made it out of the cutting-room floor at all - who'd want to test this? BBC is a reputable organization and I seriously doubt that they would make up something just to try to make the US look bad. I question how this weapon would actually work, however.

DeathgodThat is approval. You approve of things that are cool.

"approval" and "thinking someone is cool" do not go hand in hand. You may feel both ways about some people, but you can have one without the other.

Quote:It's not unfortunate, people should think they are good. If not, you end up in the gutter. Your attitude determines a lot of your behavior and where you will end up in life.

I did say it's good to have a positive self image. The "Unfortunately" part is that more than 49.9% of people think they are "above average" meaning lots of them are wrong.

Quote:What I mean is that I don't hold them in disdain because I think I am better, I hold them in disdain because of the fact that I think they are worse. There's a difference. I don't generally have an opinion about someone, good or bad, until I see them make an action I approve or disprove of. Thus, the great majority of the world's people will never have judgment passed on them by me, since I will probably never know them. I can still make generalizations like everyone else though.

Well, if you hold "pretty much everyone and everything" in disdain, you must approve of very little. Very strange that you can be so altruistic towards people that you mostly disapprove of.

Quote:They shouldn't NEED to be protected... You never saw cities being locked down for prior inaugurations.

"approval" and "thinking someone is cool" do not go hand in hand. You may feel both ways about some people, but you can have one without the other.

I disagree, but I suppose this is an issue of semantics more than anything else.

Crimson

I did say it's good to have a positive self image. The "Unfortunately" part is that more than 49.9% of people think they are "above average" meaning lots of them are wrong.

Here's a secret: more than 80% of the populace is wrong most of the time anyhow.

Crimson

Well, if you hold "pretty much everyone and everything" in disdain, you must approve of very little. Very strange that you can be so altruistic towards people that you mostly disapprove of.

I do approve of very little, I'd have thought that was clear. The list of things in my life that I approve of is dwarfed by the list of things I don't. That doesn't mean I don't still appreciate the former, though. That makes them all the sweeter to me. And it is actually pretty easy to be an altruist and still dislike people in general. I don't go out of my way to be a prick to people and am a very helpful person in real life, but I have no patience for people who aren't willing to work on their own or people who choose to be ignorant. You might be surprised by this, but pretty much everyone I encounter IRL wants to be friends with me, and until I they show me they're an idiot I'll be their pal.

Crimson

I don't see how the potential of a bunch of religious whackos attacking the ceremony makes us a bad country?

That doesn't, it's our response to the fact that jihadis could bomb us that makes us bad. When people are motivated by violent actions, crushing them under the iron heel of 'liberty' is not going to smooth things over, and neither will making our own populace live in fear of a constant yet nebulous threat.

Crimson But if America is such a hole, then surely this wouldn't be a concern.

I think most places are probably holes, it's a matter of finding one that doesn't stink as bad. Nothing is perfect as long as people are involved.

Crimson

And you don't get that here?

Sometimes I do, sometimes I don't. I'm perfectly willing to leave and see if I can better my fortunes, though. People who just accept their lot and never try to change it are sad individuals, and I'm tired of being surrounded by sad.

Crimson

Well, Canada gets bonus points because of the FUD connection, and I'd like to check out Montreal because I have heard it is excellent. Everything I have seen about New Zealand is the shit, so unless there are roaming bands of thieves or something I think I will be happy there.

Actually, that might be more enticing with the thieves.

You didn't go into Iraq to liberate the people. This is a fairly common misconception on your part. Iraq was invaded in March to enforce resolution 687 (illegally, remember) and 1441. An attempt for justification comes from the idea that there was a threat (not imminent, mind you) posed by Iraq. Such a thing is infinitely debatable, and it all relies on your definition of "threat" and what the coalition knew on March 18th, 2003.

Liberating the people, as a reason to going to war, is something called a Coup D'etats. By all standards, American as well, this is illegal-- and would never fly in any recognized court known to man. Remember kid, just about every coup d'etats in the history of mankind has attempted to be justified by the idea that "OMG WERE SAVIN PPL LOUGHHL". And while it might be true (at least in the short term), if you choose to believe this was your reasoning and justification for going to war-- thanks for proving my point that it was illegal in the first place. Now, your administration is dumb, but not that dumb. They must've known (I can only hope) that such a reasoning would never even get through congress. The illegality of it is just blantly obvious.

Bush's speeches and addresses prior to the invasion laid out the same rhetoric. "Iraq is a threat to America because we know Saddam has WMD and may give them to terrorists". He did NOT say (or even imply) "we are going to Iraq for the purpose of overthrowing the government and liberating the people".

9/11 isn't shit compared to our ruining of entire countries in Cold War conflicts or resource acquisition or simple political persecution.

We didn't go there under the banner of "saving people" we went there under the banner of overthrowing a evil tyrant with weapons of mass destruction (that had been threatened to use against us and had been used against his own people) , and free a nation afterwards that had been under the power of Saddam for years. ITS THE WAR ON TERRORISIM, NOT THE WAR ON AFGANISTAN, NOT THE WAR ON AL QUADIA, ITS THE WAR ON TERRORISIM. Spoony is absolutely right. Replace "3000" with about "100'000", "Americans" with "Iraqis" and "Terrorists" with "American freedom fighters" and you're all set.

Thinking about it, can't you wage war on yourself too? I'm sure in this WAR ON TERRORISM (TM), you'd want to blow up anyone of the "let's go invade another country forcing a government upon them and making them do things our way" pursuesion.

I already defined this for you, but i'll do it again.

After 9/11 we embarked on a WAR ON TERROR, our goal to search terrorist out and capture or kill in all corners of the globe to protect freedom from being attacked again. So you're saying that your troops are warmongers? Take it from someone first hand kid, no soldier WANTS to have to go to war and fight. But they will if they have to. Those soldiers HAVE to fight because the upper echelon says so. If they believe in the cause, that is a plus on the battlefield.

But here is something you still need to get into your otherwise thick skull:
IRAQ DID NOT KILL THE VICTIMS OF 9/11. You cannot swing this fact around to support your cause because the foundation of it is flawed COMPLETELY.

I don't know about American policies, but here ours can be done part-time over the course of a year every other weekend or in a block session in the summertime. It's called "part-time reserves" because the military knows you have school and/or full time jobs to keep up with.

because its our lives(How Many People have we suckerpunched lately?), thats why we should think ours are more important you dolt. I dont understand why you would allow them to help terrorists and do nothing about it. Why dont you get it? WHY DONT U GET IT? Y DONT U FUCKING GET IT!?!?!?!?!?! I am so damn frustrated because I cant explain it in words you can understand because I just have tried several times to no freakin avail.

This may sound bad. But I hope Canada and the UK get hit so you people realize Cowmisfits and My passion for hating terrorists. You wont understand until they hit your country like they have ours. and DeathGod if you dont understand, then you just blatenly dont care about anyone else in this country aside from those you know personally. Apathy of your own country pisses me off.

Examples of what happens when you wake the Sleeping Giant:

It was meant to sound stupid. Sipmply because it IS true, yetpeople seem to be ignoring that fact when they bring across things like "You don't know how American's feel because of terrorist actions!" (or some variation thereof).

My point being there have been major terrorist acts around the world (perhaps nothing as dramatic as 9/11), yet no "war on terrorism" was declared by America. I don't intend for that statement to be regarded as an insult, rather the point in reference.

Such as the bombings in kenya ect, we gave AID and such, we have gave AID to the isrelies in there war on stopping palistien terrorist from killing there citizens. We always help when a major "terrorist" attack is commited, however it would only make sense that once they come to our soil, epecially in the way they did , its our responsibility to counter-attack.

Other nations that have been attacked COULD launch a war on terror if they wished, and we would back them 100% (even if it was france) they simpley choose not too and to let themselves contine to be under attack.

You're one to say things are stupid, aren't ya.

I don't support the war on nouns, does that make me a "Frenchie"? Hell, I have the same reasons as the French - wanting... wait. Let's clear something up. They didn't support the war in Iraq, I don't believe they said anything about nouns.... wanting to wait until some evidence [you know, those WMDs? Oh, a funny thing. If anyone here reads the Economist, I see the "Bush gives up on finding WMD" line was in as small a font size as possible] turned up.

And gosh, aren't we all still waiting?

I didn't go to Reagan's funeral. Did you?

I'm not fucking surprised they don't support you. All the shit they are getting from Americans dumb enough to belive the propaganda about the French people being Saddam collabirators... let's not go back to how they saved YOUR asses once, eh.

Cohoots with Saddam? You're so good at backing things up, where's that tidbit of evidence?

And by the logic in your last statement, that means a couple hundred other countries are terrorists. Ireland, Scotland, Zimbabwe (bad example), Afghanistan (though I heard they're in the Colaition of the Essentially Absolutely. Local warlord lend you some troops or something?), Peru, Guam, etc etc etc.

And as for the remark earlier on about how you killed "100'000 TERRORISTS! TERRORISTS! SERIOUSLY, THEY POINTED GUNS AT US< THEY WERE EBIL ROFL DIE SCUM" or whateverthelleyousaid, no. That's the civilian count. What you probably HAVE done is turned about another 100'000 people INTO terrorists.

For a "war" that aims to crush terrorism...

You shure you succeeding? But hey, I forgot! You're cowmisfit, warmongering kid extraordinaire! You're going to enlist, then change how all this works so people won't get killed, Terrorism won't be a watchword, and ebil dictators everywhere will get a taste of Uncle Sam.

It's scary to think that the one nation on Earth that has used nuclear weapons on another nation is the United States of America. They invent a weapon of mass destruction, and the decision is that it would be fine to use it if it would save American lives. Not foreign civilians. Is that wrong? At that time, Japan had exhausted it's oil supply, lost it's aircraft carriers, and was pretty much unable to launch an effective attack against the US.

If the Germans would have invented it first, and nuked the United States, would it be a consolation to you that their decision was based on "Oh, if we kill Americans while they're still in their home country, we don't get any radioactive fallout, and we don't have to face as many soldiers in Europe." I think not.

But thankfully, the former USSR developed nuclear weapon technology, and instead of one superpower with nuclear weapons, we had two. All of a sudden it's bad to use nuclear weapons...

JavaxcxActually, to my knowledge, the intelligence didn't point to an imminent threat either. Just a suggestive threat.

I still think it was to distract Americans from the fact that this country was being surpassed in many respects by other nations, and no one had a plan to fix it.

=[DT=gbull=[L]=]DaveGMM And thinking about it, again you fall victim to your own spiralling logic. You claim I don't speak English, then accuse my sentence of being anti-American. Are you insinuating that anything that isn't English is against America?

I was making fun of you

Coming from the person who wanted to close the topic down for people making fun of cowmisfit and "forgetting" what the thread is about...

But hey, you do that. Go tell me how fun hypocrisy is.

And, if the only way you can make fun of me is say something totally illogical and quote me exposing this illogic...

You must really be able to make fun of me.

Spin Weasel the usage of "the bomb" WAS to save foreign lives as well. The sea of Japan would have run red with the combined losses of Allied and Japanese forces. It would certainly have been one of the most costly conflicts of the war as far as loss of life goes. By dropping the bomb we saved millions of American AND Japanese lives.

Doitle, the question is whether or not the ends justify the means. And it is infinitely debatable because we don't know what would happen if Hiroshima and Nakasaki didn't happen.

And all i can say is its a good thing we will never know. Ive heard of many historians (forgot where from) who have said the war would have been much more devestating had we not dropped the bomb.
