I use Windows 2000, because XP gave me absolute HELL after a while. Therefore, I can't customize my desktop too much

For those who will ask... No its not real... I just put it there for laughs

Did you ever notice that wallpapers don't really have any purpose all?
I mean you never really see it while you actually use your PC. And I highly doubt that you sit there for 5 minutes just staring at the wallpaper. And in the end they just eat up system resources.

It's something to stare at while your PC finishes starting up.

bleh...what are your PC's specs? I've seen BETTER performance with them.

EDIT: At least with AstonShell, which is what I use. WindowsBlinds used slightly more memory than the regular windows shell.

NineballNice man.I wish I had dual monitors..
Its better off without it. I have the equipment and identical monitors. It just doesnt flow, and screws up alot of games. Not to mention the starting position for windows.

hell ya dual moniter sux

they way u THINK it would work.. it doesnt

when u started the comp WITH the moniter/tv pluged in.. it would be totaly diferent in the options.. then if u just pluged it in for the first time.. was wierd

only way i liked it was on clone.. id put it on the TV and ppl sitting else where could see what im doin on the comp.. or id play games from my couch/bed

it was ok with nvidia cards cause they sum what had menus and settings built in.. but its MORE annoying with ATI cards.. cause u have to do it with the normal display menus

i dunno just didnt like it.. havent done it in a whille..
plus i need to get a 50 foot s-video cable

oblivion can i steal your wallpaper pic? muhaha

try style XP.. worked better the ashton imo.. never tried windows blinds

Don't use dual monitors unless you have a reason to. Thats of course if you don't mind error messages in the middle, etc.

You guys sure are dissing and hammering down on the dualies.

Trust me they rock. I have never had a problem with any of the "issues" that were conjured up. It worked the first time I tried and still does. I have a nVidia card and it works great. nView is very useful.

They have great application when it comes to gaming and graphic work.

It's great for gaming because I have my TS and mIRC on that monitor. I can watch my other servers while I am playing in one, in case a mod is needed there. Also I can see who joins TS and who is actually talking when the rooms get full.

For graphic work, I have all my menus for Photoshop on the secondary monitor, thus more space to work with. This also really helps when working with Flash which has a million toolbars and so little workspace.

It may take up desktop space but that is my I have a table for a desk.

If you can, and want to, I recommend it.
