<http://www.cnn.com/2005/EDUCATION/02/09/colorado.prof.ap/index.html>

This guy is a fucking moron. I hope someone kills him.

CNN.comBOULDER, Colorado (AP) -- A University of Colorado professor who likened September 11 victims to Nazis got a standing ovation when he told a campus audience of more than 1,000 people that "I'm not backing up an inch."

Ward Churchill, who had filed a lawsuit after the state university threatened to cancel his address, was interrupted several times by thunderous applause.

Churchill has resigned as chairman of the university's ethnic studies department. Gov. Bill Owens has called for Churchill to be fired, and the university's Board of Regents is investigating whether the tenured professor can be removed.

"I don't answer to Bill Owens. I do not answer to the Board of Regents in the way they think I do. The regents should do their job and let me do mine," Churchill said to thunderous clapping. "I'm not backing up an inch. I owe no one an apology."

In an essay, Churchill wrote that workers in the World Trade Center were the equivalent of "little Eichmanns," a reference to Adolf Eichmann, who ensured the smooth running of the Nazi system. Churchill also spoke of the "gallant sacrifices" of the "combat teams" that struck America.

The ethnic studies professor said Tuesday his essay was referring to "technocrats" who participate in what he calls repressive American policies around the world.

A longtime American Indian Movement activist, he said he is also culpable because his efforts to change the system haven't succeeded. "I could do more. I'm complicit. I'm not innocent," he said.

The Boulder Faculty Assembly, which represents professors at the Boulder campus, has said Churchill's comments were "controversial, offensive and odious" but supports his right to say them based on the principle of academic freedom.

During his 35-minute speech, Churchill said the essay was not referring to children, firefighters, janitors or people passing by the World Trade Center who were killed during the attacks.

The essay and follow-up book attracted little attention until Churchill was invited to speak last month at Hamilton College in Clinton, New York, which later canceled his talk out of security concerns.

University of Colorado officials cited those same concerns but backed off after Churchill filed a lawsuit earlier Tuesday asking a judge to force the school to let him speak.

The crowd Tuesday night was loud and orderly as Churchill spoke: "I do not work for the taxpayers of the state of Colorado. I do not work for Bill Owens. I work for you," he said.

About two dozen police officers were scattered inside and around the ballroom where the speech was given. Most of those attending supported Churchill.

"I've read some of Ward's work," said 26-year-old Vinita Laroia, an environmental studies major. "I think what he has to say is true and interesting. I wanted to hear his actual voice say what he's thinking."

The ACLU issued a statement defending Churchill's right to speak out and called on regents, legislators and the governor "to stop threatening Mr. Churchill's job because of the content of his opinions."

David Horowitz, a champion of conservative causes who has long accused American universities of overstocking their faculties with leftists, has said firing Churchill would violate his First Amendment rights and set a bad precedent.

He called instead for an inquiry into the university's hiring and promotion procedures to see how Churchill managed to rise to the chairmanship of the school's ethnic studies department.

Well now, he MAY have a valid reason for saying this (I hope the sarcasm is apperant...). We just have yet to hear it.

One way that it would be valid was if everyone in those buidings had secret torture or gas chambers, targeting only a specific race. Who knows, perhaps the 9/11 attack was actually a mission to free those prisoners, and went horribly wrong.

(I really hope the sarcasm is apperant....)

He compared those workers to Adolf Eichmann, who made sure the Nazi regime ran smoothly. Thats all. He didn't say they were all monstrous Himmlers. Eichmann made the Nazi regime run smoothly, and those unfortunate workers in the Twin Towers practically supported out whole economy!

He's certainly NOT blatantly calling them Nazis like the topic implies. From what I gather from the article, this essay is not about the 9/11 victims and it is more an attack on the government. I don't think the article by any means shows us the whole story.

I think Gbull is right, and he is trying to establish a name for himself, but he's using the Nazi comparison to stir up a bit of controversy and attention.

Sorry Iron but you are wrong. The title of his essay is : "On the Justice of Roosting Chickens : Reflections on the Consequences of U.S. Imperial Arrogance and Criminality"

If he really met to compare them to a smooth running machine he didn't have to compare them to Nazis. He clearly states in his essay that what the people were doing in the buildings were costing lives. He is mean spirited and hateful in the entire essay. The people in these buildings were not just from America as many liberal exteremists would like you to think. The terrorists killed a grouping of all different races, religions, and nationalities. This man is very wrong in his statements and should be arrested for treason.

Actually, no.. and yes.

No, he's not simply comparing them to someone who ran operations smoothly. Yes, he IS comparing them to Nazis.

Read this interview, it may offer some insight.

Basically, he does have a good point. However, he goes about it in perhaps the worst possible way.

Jesus Christ that guy is a moron, he compares the US to the third reich yet states that there is no other moment in history of which to describe the actions taking place in the US. And albeit I did at first think much lower of him then when I read the article, I still think he is a propoganda machine, looking not just to strengthen his political point of view, but also his own name. By spewing this controversy he stabalizes himself as a "Political Slim Shady", making his fame by nothing but saying whatever he thinks will offend the Right the most. There are much better ways he could have compared them then to go to the extreme of what he knew would cause a stir up and dub them "Nazis". He is either extremely bright, or stupid as this little tyraid of his may cost him his living. Although personally I would love nothing more than to see this tool fry, he is untouchable because EVERYONE is entitled to free speech, and I myself believe in that law to its exact words, so no charges should be filed. Sorry, I havent been following this topic a whole lot before reading that article, so I dont know if they are attempting to file charges.

Of course there are similarities between that regime and practically every other one in the world, but the fact that he chose the Nazi regime tells us a lot.

You seriously call this, thinking for himself?

Quote:I take it none of you have actually read what he wrote or saw him on C-SPAN defending himself...

Get a clue, then come back.

He said NOTHING.. just like every other argument he presents.. all he did was say "yea, what they said.. read that then come talk to me".. It's quite pathetic. He offered absolutely no personal side of the argument, absolutely no insight to if or how he agreed with Churchill.. he never offers any of his own opinions.. But if you say something he can't answer, just give him a few days to talk to his dad to see what he says..

Take a look at the thread I made attacking his Thomas Jefferson quote.. Seems SFE has "Nothing" to say in there either.

There's nothing wrong with SFLT's father raising his son in the fashion he wishes and to believe what he thinks his son should believe. Though what he may be teaching his son is the blind following of the Democratic party, it's his right as a parent to raise him that way.

I seek my father's help and guidance in all aspects of my life, including my personal understanding of how the world around me works. Everything I have learned about basic economic principles have so far come mostly from my dad (as well as my cousin, who has a degree in economics from UGA). Are you going to start attacking me for agreeing with a large portion of what my dad tells me?

I seem to remember Michael Moore saying somewhere that kids shouldn't listen to what their parents try to teach them about politics (or any other subject, for that matter)....
