There is yet another phpBB exploit out. As usual I applied a backport patch to our custom phpBB we run here, so it won't work...anyone I notice trying to do it will get perma-banned

The chances of a new forum were everyone gets reset post counts ect is virtually zero dude, people like this one, change is bad beause all of the forum regulars are mostly people who have been here for a very long time and will not welcome change of that magnitude.

I am getting REALLY tired of your attitude. I am not changing these forums. phpBB is the most popular and most used PHP based forum software, and that makes it have more people looking over its code trying to find exploits.

Furthermore, I am not one of those people who changes my forum software every other month and loses all accounts and posts. I think it shows a huge lack of respect for your visitors to make a move that you KNOW will cost you data, and I do not like to make drastic changes.

I do my best to keep things up and running and as stable as possible for the people who visit here, and we do our best to follow the exploits and patch them. I also have offsite backups of the database several times per day so any data loss would be minimal.

IRON FART"==" means equal.

"===" means equal to and same type.

<http://www.php.net/manual/en/language.operators.comparison.php>

Right for example you can compare a number and a string like:

if ("a"==0) would return true, because a string is converted to zero by default if it don't contain a number at the start, but

if ("a"===0) would return false, because String is not Int

LaeubilRON FART"==" means equal.
"===" means equal to and same type.

<http://www.php.net/manual/en/language.operators.comparison.php>
Right for example you can compare a number and a string like:

if ("a"==0) would return true, because a string is converted to zero by default if it don't contain a number at the start, but if ("a"===0) would return false, because String is not Int

That's not quite true, because PHP does automatic type switching in the case of "==" so the 0 integer would automatically be converted to a string of "0" and be false. Using "===" would prevent PHP from changing the integer to a string.

<http://us2.php.net/manual/en/language.operators.comparison.php>

`$a == $b` Equal TRUE if $a is equal to $b.

`$a === $b` Identical TRUE if $a is equal to $b, and they are of the same type. (introduced in PHP 4)

If you compare an integer with a string, the string is converted to a number. If you compare two numerical strings, they are compared as integers.

I read & understood most of it...so in conclusion, you can juggle between data types in PHP but you can't prevent PHP from automatic juggling (converting)? All I was asking really, as in visual basic you can stop automatic conversions using option strict on to gain more control over what's happening in the code
