For me Gilmours finest solo is still from "Another Brick in the Wall Pt 2"

Completely badass inside of the small timeframe he had to work with. Nothing long and wasteful. Awesome from front to back.

Death- together as one

Death- Scavenger of human sorrow

Those songs contain very good guitar solo's.

I'm a bass player, And my favorite bass solo:

Iron maiden-powerslave.

It took me a damn long time to learn that song.

I beg to differ. I do agree it's a mofo solo though. I love it.

If you're talking about Death...I really dig "Voice of the Soul" from Death. No lyrics, but the guitars express so much more emotion than many lyricists attempt.

Have you seen the live version of Comfortably Numb? I can't remember if it's on Delicate Sound of Thunder or Pulse...but the second solo is extended. That is just pure musical bliss.

oh ya... nice stuff! I keep thinking about a song called "Filthy Habits" from the Lather album. Frank Zappa that is. That is an incredible solo if not a guitar driven piece altogether. Sustain on that is amazing.

My favorite song without any lyrics would have to be this.

I like that, but emotionally it just can't compare to Voice of the Soul. The last few seconds of Voice of the Soul...simply heart-wrenching.

I've only heard a few Death songs. It is death metal after all, so the vocals kill it. Speed metal all the way!

Exmortus - Christ of Oblivion

This band is from Riverside and unless any of you live near there, you havent heard of them. They have a demo out with four songs, above is one of them.

Just thought I would share them with you, I love their music.
