Ever since about a year ago, I've had a problem connecting to .tk sites. It always says the website can't be found. Does anyone have an answer to why this is happening or can help me fix it?

Sometimes the dot.tk server goes down for updates, additional websites etc. It should be only temporary, refresh the page, or if it has just been created, wait a few hours for it to register with the dot.tk server.

no no. thats not what I mean, actually. I had a site which was like this: <http://blabla.blabla.blabla.nl>. So I took a .tk domain, so I had something like <http://www.blabla.tk>.
when I type the .tk name in my browser, it took ages untill the site was loaded. when I used the normaal <http://blabla.blabla.blabla.nl>. it was loaded in a few seconds.
