I used Norton av, worked fine until I "upgraded" to xp

I also used the standard windows defragmenter, that's fine too but I don't seem to be able to shut everything down without collapsing the system and ballsing it up. So yeah a good defrag program would be great, seeing as it's not been done now for about a year

If that's the case, I've missed about 24 changes.

Holy crap! Someone call HAZMAT.
I use System Mechanic 4 BTW - I don't think that's a freeware though...

I know you got to do it regularly, but the bloody thing won't let me. I even got "Defrag for windows" which is supposed to shut everytthing down so it can defrag in peace, but it won't
