If you remember about a year and a half or so ago, Namehunter made a mod and released it to a few testers. It was the most unique thing ever, but it's functionality wasn't going to allow it online with many people.

The mod was basically a little grassy, flat map with an APC as a purchase terminal, and you could get airstrikes and other stuff, and above the GDI base was a platform you could get to to launch an ion attack against Nod.

The thing about this is you could find a certain section of the map and there was an apc you destroyed to create a "Construction Pad." You would go up to a section and poke it and you could buy other things like fortresses or rocket pods (AI controlled), etc. I just wanted to know if anyone else has that mod laying around, because I'd like to play it one more time.
Thanks.

I had it, but it's vanished from my HD.

Insert edit:

Was it called Tech Assault?

I've had a look through the web, but CnC Ammo appears to have died at some point, and there's almost nothing I can find about it archived on these forums.

Didn't CnC Ammo's files all go to CnC Source? Could check there.

Namehunter had given this to me it was great fun

i got all happy when i found the .zip on my CD

but

im missing main file i think it was a .pkg

i got 2 files in there maybe somebody has the other half i believe these are useless but meh

If someone has a version of the map I will host it online so everyone can redownload it.

Just email it to me and I will load it up and post the download link.

yeah the game itself was the .pkg which was the important part.
