
Subject: I really need a new host.

Posted by Dave Anderson on Thu, 21 Apr 2005 21:44:02 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I need a new host. Just today they changed my banner option to where it sticks on my website, as before I had it set to a pop up. Then, they locked me out of the banner options page and it closes everytime I go to it. And then that iframe box where the pic of the day logo goes is all jacked up. Its just supposed to be a pic of that one square, not a scroll of the whole pic of the day picture. Anyways, I need a new host. So if any of you know a good "FREE" host, please let me know.

Subject: I really need a new host.

Posted by Opalkilla on Thu, 21 Apr 2005 23:00:26 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

There aren't any hosts that will let you run ad-free pages. For christs sake, go buy some cheap hosting if you want quality service.

Subject: I really need a new host.

Posted by cheesesoda on Thu, 21 Apr 2005 23:06:15 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

<http://www.invivo-host.com>

It's not free, but for $3/month, it's good. I'm quite pleasantly surprised at the quality of the hosting that I have. Granted, I finally was able to get my web sites up yesterday and today. The DNS resolves quickly. Within 30 minutes I was able to access my hosting via the domain that I use it for. I had some issues with customer service, but the probably lays within Comcast and my email apparently.

Just today I instant messaged the admin on MSN, and he set my hosting up immediately as soon as he had my money. I'm quite pleased, and I would suggest them to anybody looking for cheap and quality hosting.

Before anyone asks, I was NOT told to promote invivo-host or anything of the sort. This is purely me writing about the host because I am quite pleased.

Subject: I really need a new host.

Posted by Dave Mason on Fri, 22 Apr 2005 22:35:36 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

So when is Mr Cheeky paying you for advertising? cough
