I never noticed any differences after doing it. So i don't do it anymore, it's only a waste of time for me.

I have one much worse. 120gig. There are no banks of blue on this drive. And I still don't know why it got so bad. It must be those video files I was editing. Bloody swapfiles were huge.
So far 28 hours of defraging, and it's not done yet.

If I can get a picture I will.

edit=time was wrong.

28 hours? That can't be right. I defragged my 3 partitions a few days ago. One partition was only 2% fragmented so it took no time at all, but the other two partitions which totalled up to about 65GB defragged in less than ten minutes. They were each about 35-40% fragmented.

WTF? Are you crazy?!?! You change your underwear once a week? That is insane man. I couldn't do that. I only have one pair.

I am not kidding. 28 hours (about 6 of that with a message telling me that some files can not be defragmented and that I should try again)

And it is not done yet. Since I have had to remove 20 gigs of files.

I do allot of video editing at the moment (making giffs- mpegs- flash files with movieclips imbedded) - its sort of a project I have set my self. The swap files needed are pretty huge.
All the system files are fine, and the pc runs at a normal speed. It's just taking a little longer to fix the rest.

All the rest of my computers run fine and are in top condition.

dark demon you shouldn't defrag your hard drive with less than 25% of space free. 10.something * 4 is under 46. you've probably lost data by now..

secondly walrus, you are using your computer while defragging??? No wonder it is taking so long....!!

No, I might have explained wrong. It's a pc I use but while its defragging no one is alowed near it. Everything is shut off program wise. I still don't know why it's taking so long.

Any one have any advice?

I haven't run defrag on mine in several months, don't even really remember how many exactly. I'm probably going to do it in the next couple days, it takes about 3-5 hours.

I don't really have any problems with it starting over (maybe once, but it zips right through to where it was), since it's done in safe mode.

You should all do it regularly.

If you havent done it for a very long time, then the first defrag may take a long time, but after that if you do it once a month or once every 2 weeks or so, then it will only take a few minutes.

I have done a defrag in ages...well I only re-formatted about 3 months ago so it won't be that bad lol...

Good reminder though. I will do it this week.

those are some messed up drives lol

i back up my drive once or twice a month.. so i defrag before i back up i normaly use the normal windows defrag..

but i've tried the defrag that norton system tools has..
and when i go and defrag with the windows defrag..
its totaly messed up.. frags every where..
it re-frags my drives..

but whats so good with diskeepper? before i go and d/l it to try.

i dunno if this is true..
but ive been told to defrag in safe mode.. does a better job?
it does take alot longer.. not sure if thats a good thing or not..

Diskkeeper, once you have defragged once, you dont have to defrag again

it auto defrags, lol

I just tried diskkeeper. It's fast, and deals with the larger files that the windows defragger will not touch.
 I think I will stick with it.

I believe our old computer's 60GB HD hasn't been defragmented at all in the past two years

I wanted to, but it needs 10% or so of disk space free, and I never had more than 1 GB free. Ah well, we've got a new computer now, so now I have the space to store things on. The old one'll get his defrag sometime
