Actually, it's a good right for a moderator to kick you for using foul words if there server doesn't want it. And as I see it you were being an ass.

I wouldn't have kicked you, I would have been watching you some extra. I once got qkicked on the pits myself for some minor thing Like this. It's nothing special.

I actually Like it when servers are against swearing, there are to much 12 year olds who like to use words on the internet excessive because they get slapped by their parents if they use them in real-life.

I fail to see how they tried to "beat you down." After telling you that you were kicked, then banned for breaking a rule and abusing a mod, which is an offense in most servers, you resorted to the age old "you can't spell or write" attack. Then, when they locked the topic, you created another one in which most of the argument also consisted of spelling accusations. Contrary to popular belief, accusing someone of writing poorly on the Internet is NOT a plausible case for your argument.

As KOSs captain I must say that most of the replies in here seemed to have understood the whole question.

1. You weren't banned, you were !kick 'ed. You still didn't understand that
2. We just followed the rules: qkick for swearing, then kick because u insulted a mod
3. U come on our forums and start making trouble. I fail to see how you owned us... We just closed your numerous topics.

Now to make it clear: you aren't welcome on our forums or server again. Don't spread bad things about our clan because you were punished for not following teh rules.

He banned me after sarcasticly pointing out that his joke wasn't funny. Fair enough, ban me for swearing, that's who I am. But the idocy of a ban for sarcasm aka "mod abuse" is rather hilarious.

"DJM" I basically take heed and stop swearing.

Even after I stop I get a warning for fuck all.

And for christ's sake, it's a word thats all it is. Who, seriously is going to drop down and die because of a word, a noise.

The spelling corrections were meant as another way of pointing out how unprofessional they are. Have you honestly ever heard of a "respected mod" cough say "no, my Grandma"? It makes him sound like a twelve year old.

The comment "you're digging your own grave". I mean you're acting like I care, ban me from the website, I don't care, I'll post there through a proxy. Ban me from the server, it's not as if I'm missing out on anything.

True, the initial post is fine. But you keep at it, trying to prove a point that either you're wrong about or they fail to see.

Why should it matter if they fail to see they have a "n00b Mod"? You don't care, remember?

Then you state that after being banned from the forum, you'll retrun to post whenever you feel like it. Someone who didn't care would shrug off the ban, and simply not return. Only if you cared would you even WANT to return to the forum.

And then there are the spelling correction. If you seriously didn't care, you'd simply ignore them and continue with what you were doing. It's the sign of someone who has lost an arguement when they have to rely on spelling to prove their point.

As far as I'm aware, nobody won or lost the argument, they kept cowering away and locking the topics.

"warranto" But you keep at it, trying to prove a point

Actually I'm correcting allegations.

For instance, people who cant read claiming that I got banned for swearing, which, had they have banned me for, would be a fine, fair ban.

warranto Then you state that after being banned from the forum, you'll retrun to post whenever you feel like it. Someone who didn't care would shrug off the ban, and simply not return. Only if you cared would you even WANT to return to the forum.

There are other things there that I would like to have my say on. For instance, they banned a guy for an offence he did not commit.

That's quite an ignorant statement. Basically you feel you can disregard a rule because you use the word all the time and don't care how others react to it.

DJM wrote on Mon, 06 June 2005 11:53The spelling corections were meant as another way of pointing out how unprofessional they are.

Once again, attacking someone's spelling gets you nowhere. Someone's spelling has nothing to do with how they run their server. If it did, Renegade would be in deep shit. I don't think that the moderators' "profession" is Renegade anyways.

It wasn't the sarcasm, dumbass.

It was the fact that you broke the rules twice, got kicked twice, and made fun of the moderator afterward.

You know a police officer will arrest you if you get warned for doing drugs after you make a sarcastic remark to him? This isn't much different.

DJM you say that the point of the story was to depict KOSs members as "hypocritical idiots." But when I read both threads you started, I can't find where they are either one of those words. You come to their forums saying some mod is an idiot for kicking you for breaking the rules. They explain to you why you were kicked, stated so 2 or 3 times from different members. Then, when the topic IS locked because the discussion is over....you come back! I've read and reread both threads and all posts, and nowhere are they hypocritical, unless you count pointing out some spelling mistakes you made in one of your posts, which he did because you accused him of the inability to type. So this is probably why no one is "getting your point"....there is none.
