I suppose westwood - now in name only as far as I know, is owned by EA. They can repackage any game that has no studio - commissioned producer of its own, with the Westwood name. Or just cobble together a design team and have them work under the Westwood banner.

Like Rare who made the most awesome games for the N64 - Westwood games would bare almost no similarity to the games that made the original company famous.

Oh well. People sell. out, and shit happens.

I think I got some of the above a little mixed up, feel free to put it right if you know any better.

How much budget does Westwood need to get back on its feet, just hypethetically speaking, say I had the budget to get Westwood back on its feet, how much would I be in for??

Most likely not. Seeing as EA owns the Westwood name and all its assets, the only way it would come back is if EA revived it. Due to the fact that it was closed for financial reasons, the probability of that is negligible.

I'm just gonna stop with the Westwood crap, but honestly I have 500000 that I could have had it assigned to Westwood and its employees, but by what your saying that EA owns every right of Westwood, am thinking that EA will never revive Westwood, thinking that Westwood someday again could become a major problem for EA, by all means EA sucks, sorry I just had to say it and it feels damn good!!!

If you invest that in Blackhand Studios, I promise you we'll assemble a great team to work on Renegade 2.

If you are being serious I would suggest getting in touch with Petroglyph games and funding them, it wont have the C&C name or the Renegade name, but they could produce a similar style of game, assuming there is sufficient demand for it....

EDIT: Or donate it to BHS, which Crimson suggested while I wrote this ^^

Heh, combine the two. Give the money to BHS so they can buy the name and all rights attached to it from EA, then they can hire petroglyph to make the game. Or, instead of petroglyph, get the old westwood team back together just for the purpose of finishing off the two[?] remaining games that were planned. ie. Renegade 2 and Tiberium twilight.

$500,000 wouldn't even touch the sides of the hole that kind of money would leave in your bank account.

Sarcastic only as far that I know it would never happen. It would still be an interesting thing to achieve though.

$500,000? Lol, that probably could have been almost sufficient 10 years ago, but now it takes millions to make a "major" game, more or less depending on if you license an engine or pay a dozen programmers. An engine like Doom 3, Unreal Engine 2 (or 3), or Source themselves cost about $400,000+ to license, plus royalties. (The slightly aging Quake 3 Arena engine costs about $250,000 to license right now, Unreal Engine 2 is $350,000 with royalties)

$500,000 would be enough to license an engine, and pay a team of about 2-5 for one year, with maybe a little bit left over.

no that kind of money does not grow on trees, or anything like that, and yes my twin brother is a very dumb fuckin moron, and yes he has that money, hes taking that after my dad, because my dad gave him land and my brother sold his land back home, and again, he has that kind of money, but do you think I will let him do this rediculous thing! 500000CAN, I will not let him give that much money to some stupid game, he just donated 100000 to hospital for sick children, do you think I will let him give 500000 to some game, I understand that he lives with Renegade and westwood games, but that much money is rediculous to give out to anybody!!

End of the story!!!

How about donating some of it to Blackhand Studios to keep the RenGuard network alive? It costs hunderts of dollars every month, and we pay most of it on our own..

NCAA should be alot better graphics-wise and Battlefield 2 takes a super computer to play. EA sucks.

I wasnt relating to Battlefield 2, just their previous games. Ive never even seen BF2 in action, so i cant make a decision.

As for NCAA, the game aint about graphics. If you can remember the old John Madden Football for the Sega Genesis, NCAA looks alot better.

the graphics have not taken an overhaul in NCAA since 2001. Thats not improvement. Ive had every one from NCAA 2002 - NCAA 2005. I also have the madden from all those years. I won't be getting either this year. When EA purchased the rights to the NFL, they basically relinquished their obligation to try. EA sucks.

I actually really enjoy Ea Sports games. They are great for long term play (seasons, playoffs, tourneys)... But their shooters etc, not so much.

And, since im Bill Gates 3rd cousin, im gonna by Renegade and call it Grebegade...

Yeah, EA's Sports section is much greater than their other sections, but i still like Battlefield: Vietnam and some of their other games.
