I started screwing around with Win-Amp buttons, and found out something really interesting. You know those vertical sliding bars in the middle of the player? Set them up as follows:

1st Bar: TOP -- 2nd Bar: BOT -- 3rd -- 9th Bars: TOP -- 10th Bar: BOT

It makes it sound kinda like your hearing it from across a phone or something. Its pretty neat.

EDIT: My Mom just wandered through here and i made her listen to it. She said "Mono, not stereo."

You post an image in about 90% of your posts, and a lot of them are old. Eventually people will start to get sick of it.

The 'vertical sliding bars' are part of winamps equalizer, which basically allows you to change the qualities of the sound. So sorry to burst your bubble but it's not really a discovery, but at least your learning about sound effects. I like that ferret thing by the way.

Alright, firstly, ive stopped with the pictures. Gbull told me how stupid they were after i was starting to get enough of them myself, and decided i would only post them when they are needed.

And Dishman, i know its part of Winamp's equalizer, i was just noting the one perticular setup, which basically turned off one speaker. And thank you, atleast someone thought it was good. Albeit completely off topic, still pretty good.
