Doesn't mean she doesn't read them. Besides, maybe she doesn't answer anything but things she considers silly; things that could easily be answered by other members of the forums.

In this particular instance, you might just be better off making a new account if you truly cannot figure out your own password. Try them all before making a new n00bstories account. Chances are, you'll figure it out over time. Crimson, nor anyone else, can decode your password for you.

besides, the pw is probably stored as a hash, which means that it cannot be converted back to the actual password

That's pretty much what I meant. Sorry for not clarifying.

I don't know much about her admin rights on the forum, but she could maybe overwrite the original password with a new one.

well with phpBB forums an admin can change a users pw without knowing their old one...

I guess the same applies to other forum systems
