Why would I want Firefox to block pop-up advertisements when Opera does it already? At Sarah's house, right now, I have to use Firefox and it's horrible compared to what Opera is capable of. It's even worse than the last time I used it. I don't see any pop-up blocker, there's little functionality implemented with the new "tabs" and the browser itself runs slow and inefficiently compared to Opera.

If you get the professional edition of ad-aware, their pop-up blocker works quite well. Also, an easier way than to deal with pop-ups, disable java and javascript. That'll nearly neutralize all pop-ups.

The thread's purpose is for pop-up blockers, not our opinions on Firefox and Opera.

Please let's not turn this into an Opera vs Firefox thread. I don't care about which is better, I just use what I use.

Regardless if we use "shit" or a "superior browser" it still doesn't negate the fact that there ARE better pop-up blockers available rather than the ones built into a browser.

Perhaps so, but that doesn't make Firefox any less shit than it already is.

How many pop-ups do you ppl get that you have to complain about them? 99.9% of my pop-ups come from "xxx" and "password" sites. If i don't count that then i get less then 5 pop-ups a week.

IE 6 no pop-up blocker at all.

I have yet to try FF 1.5, but Opera 8.5 does a decent enough job for me.

No, I'm not at Sarah's friends' house. I'm at her house, and I'm using the computer because I check various websites before I log off for the day - just like she does. I do wonder why I'm justifying myself to someone who probably hasn't had female companionship and tries to pretend he's lording it over someone else, though.

I don't care, i'm just trying to tell you to save your breath. Everyone on this forum knows how you feel, no one needs to hear it again. Tell me, do you like listening to the same song over and over again?

I disagree. I have seen dumb labtops with a touch screen in which you can use a stylis to write on them then have the computer transfer it into arial or w/e.

Haha, good one Aircraftkiller. But im sorry to dissapoint you, but I do have a girlfriend. Her name is Jessica. We have been going out since 4-24-05. It's been going pretty well so far. It's good to hear you found someone that will love you for who you are. Thats important in a spouse. Good luck with your relationship Johnathan.

p.s. Is that how you spell your name?
