As many as I feel necessary. And in case you havn't noticed, this is an American website, and suprise suprise American's speak English. I could speak 100 other languages and it'd make no difference at all to how I communicate on these forums.

Regardless of the fact that you've strayed from my point, I couldn't give any less of a fuck whether you can speak more than one language or not. My point is if you can't even type a sentence that makes sense, don't bother.

Can you answer a simple question? Obviously not.

Never the less, I have determined that you are the smartest person whom I have never met. I have the utmost respect for any person that can speak over 100 languages. I am adding you to my list of great people. My "only if I could be like..." list. My new list Jesus, Einstein, Bill Parcells, and DJM. Wow, thats good company. "And just think it" your the only dickhead on the list. Einstein could speak both English and German. "Look it" if he were here today in these forums, you could critique his grammar and he could grade your math problems. Maybe you can help me to understand his theory of relativity, it's very hard for me to grasp.

Who am I kidding? Thats all bullshit, and your just a dick. I feel we have something in common.

I'll save pointing out the errors in your post for now.

If you'd care to read (a skill many members of these forums seem to be highly inept) what I wrote then maybe you wouldn't have embarrassed yourself like that. I quite clearly wrote "I could speak 100 other languages and it'd make no difference at all to how I communicate on these forums."

But for y-o-u-r (note the usage of your, it is possessive!) sake, I'll also point out that I did not say I do speak 100 other languages.

To add to your utter stupidity you have also neglected to read that my knowledge of different languages has absolutely nothing at all to do with how I communicate on these forums. The universal language for these forums is English, and as long as it is, I'll god-fucking damn well speak it.

Also, if you're going to make cheap shots such as that rather unfunny, unoriginal, lame "Dick head test" at least put some more effort into it.

Finally, Kuemmern sie sich um ihre Angelegenheiten. Okay?

Where did I say I was smarter than you? Where did I compare my intelligence to yours? Where did I even say I was smart? Although through your consistent stream of drivel you've managed to convince me that you truly are an idiot.

I did on the other hand enjoy the punch line. You seem to follow a pattern in your posts and petty insults. You lack originality, wit, and the brain capacity to think before you post.

Also, is it gay to send another man a giant heart with their name on it. Don't answer that. I don't want to read another question to a question.

I'll answer what I can understand from that complete pile of nonsensical crap.

First of all, the highly unorigional, overused "fuck you" is growing old, I'm not insulted by it, I'm not upset over it. Try harder.

Second, what the fuck are you on about? Complete sentences? If you're on about "fuck you", technically, if you take the meaning of "fuck" as "to have sexual intercourse with" then no, it isn't a complete sentence.

Third, go look up the word "rhetorical".

Fourth, I refer to you as little boy as you appear to have the mental age of a child, not a mature adult. Furthermore, I couldn't give any less of a shit if you were bigger than me or not, It has nothing to do with what I wrote.

Fifth, I don't have a clue what you are on about. I understood "let me guess your reply", it made no sense when you just quoted what I'd already written, but then you completely lost me on the elephants bit.

Sixth, me and gbull have what's known as a "sense of humour", you can look that up as well if you want.

Finally, here's something to help you out

Your = possessive. Example, "I like your car"

You're = you are. Example, "You're so unorigional"

Now go and do some community service. You obviously didn't listen in your* English classes, so it's the least you can do for wasting the tax payer's money on your schooling.

Let me make it easier for you as you still appear to be unable to read:

Quote:Finally, here's something to help you out

Your = possessive. Example, "I like your car"

You're = you are. Example, "You're so unoriginal"

First of all, isn't it weird how you of all people can call me hypocritical.

Next, you need to sort out the difference between plural and singular. I called you an idiot, not people idiotS.

I don't talk to people in my community like that, no. You'd do well to be able to differentiate between text and actual speech.

Quote: I have made some deductions from this forum as well. You're a lonely, prejudice, little person with a bad speech impediment.

Thanks for proving my point about the mental age. The way I act on a forum, be it mature or not, has no affiliation whatsoever with how many friends I have, whether I'm prejudiced or not, how little I am or whether I have a speech impediment or not.

Now where you seem to have conjured up that complete stream of drivel is beyond me. Let's start on this,

1) Prejudiced: An adverse judgment or opinion formed beforehand or without knowledge or examination of the facts.

I based my deduction on the way you act. I have what we English call reasons for why I think you're an idiot, and I think I've made these clear enough. Now go back and READ before you ask me what these are. I know you appear to be incapable of this ominous activity but give it a try. You may be amazed by the results.

Learn the meaning of the word before you use it please.

2) Speech impediment? A hinderance or obstruction of speech. I don't know where the fuck you got this idea from, when exactly have you heard me speak before? How you deduced that I have a speech impediment from mere text is mind-numbing stuff.

Moving on,

Quote: I don't know about about you

Enough said.

Next, the "him and I" phrase is technically correct yes, but the "me and him" phrase is also a commonly accepted phrase amongst today's society. "Him and I" is mainly for formal usage and in case you haven't noticed, I'm not writing formally to you or any other members of this forum.

Quote:Quote:You're making something out of nothing. This argument is pointless.

I agree

Then why continue it? If it's so pointless, why do you so stubbornly keep posting?

Finally, the quote below simply shows the irony of what the fool posted.

You're both being idiots. I don't understand how anyone can get mad at someone who's speaking English as a second or third language for making a couple slight errors. Yeah, it's an American board. So what? Am I going to get in trouble for typing 'colour' instead of 'color'? No one gives a shit, we all understood him. Also, I find it vaguely funny that you would go on to call someone else immature, DJM. You seem like a smart guy, so hopefully you'll realize that there are better and more productive ways of feeling superior than correcting the grammar of strangers.

I would just like to note, for the record, that it is positively stunning how shaky a grasp most people have on the English language. Perhaps it is because I spend so much of my time working with words, but I just cannot comprehend how anyone who has passed third-grade English could possibly not know the difference between "your" and "you're." One is a contraction consisting of a pronoun and a verb, one is a possessive pronoun.

I'm equally annoyed, for that matter, with people who cut in and correct grammar when their own grasp of the language has several glaring holes- "American's" for instance. Apostrophes are never used to indicate a plural- they denote possessive and are used in contractions. I apologize- this is one of my pet peeves, and it annoys me to nearly the same extent as people who spell "turret" with an extraneous n.

Americans- plural of American. "The Americans visited Europe."

American's- possessive of American. "The American's suit was clean and new."

Most folks who read these forums are advanced enough in their education that they ought to have much more competence and ability with the English language. This is a message board, after all- there are no time limits imposed on posting; you are not going to be penalized in any way for taking a few extra minutes to go over your spelling and grammar before clicking the button. It is, of course, entirely up to the poster to decide whether or not to make that effort, and sadly most people do not seem highly inclined to do so. In my opinion, that reflects very poorly on the quality of education and the intellectual capacity of most of the English-speaking world (allowances must be made, naturally, for people who are only just learning the language- English is, after all, one of the most complicated and tricky languages to learn).

edit And for the love of sanity, if you make a typo or some other screw-up during posting, do please use the edit button. That's why the damned thing is there.

Yes, I have the same pet peeve when someone says "emo's" instead of "emos". Too many people do that.

Along with the "you're" and "your" issue, too many people confuse "their" and "they're", along with "its" and "it's". I mean, it's not that fucking hard to understand. It's just another way for people to rape the English language.

The word "it" is a rather peculiar exception. "Its" is actually the possessive form, while "it's" is a contraction of "it is." That's a fairly common mistake, and a little easier to understand.

DJM wrote on Fri, 02 December 2005 15:37You have a really bad case of verbal diahorrea.

This is why the title of the thread is in quotation marks.

I decided that I would choose a sentence from one of DJM's posts in this thread and point out the grammar mistakes. Within ten seconds, I found this:

DJM

And in case you havn't noticed, this is an American website, and suprise suprise American's speak English.

1. Begins sentence with a conjunction.
2. Misspelled words:
 - havn't
 - suprise (X2)
3. Uses the singular possessive form of "American," as opposed to simply the plural.

Strictly speaking, your sentence doesn't make sense. What is this strange thing known as "speak English" that the American you were referring to apparently owns?

EDIT:

Here is a helpful tip to improve your use of English grammar:

1. The semicolon (;) is your friend. I like to use it when I need to join two subject-related independent clauses!

By the way, there is another structural error in DJM's sentence that I failed to bring up; however, it is closely related to "offense" #1. Can anybody catch it?

The second sentence you want him to create(period or semicolon after the word website.) starts with another conjunction.

You should also know that you are, in fact, allowed to use a coordinating conjunction to begin a sentence:

<http://www.getitwriteonline.com/archive/032601.htm>

Quote:Most likely, many people believe they should not start a sentence with a coordinating conjunction because their grammar teachers in grade school discouraged them from doing so. Yet such a rule is completely unjustifiable. When grammar teachers teach youngsters the essentials of sentence structure, they most likely explain that coordinating conjunctions are used to hold together elements within a sentence. Therefore, they may discourage students from starting sentences with coordinating conjunctions because they are trying not only to explain conjunctions but also to help their students learn to avoid sentence fragments like this one:

Teachers in grade school just discourage this because younger children tend not to use proper sentence structure when they use coordinating conjunctions like so:

Quote:She was a nice girl. And smart, too.

However with a proper subject and predicate, you can use a coordinating conjunction as the first word of a sentence. Take this for example:

Quote:She wanted to leave the office, drive home, and spend the evening alone in front of a fire. But she knew that duty called her to finish the project and to put her best effort into making it superb.

gbullThe second sentence you want him to create(period or semicolon after the word website.) starts with another conjunction.

What I had written implies that the "and" would be removed:

DJM
...in case you havn't [sic] noticed, this is an American website; suprise [sic] suprise [sic] american's [sic] speak English.

Yes, I am being mean-hearted with the [sic] barrage.

I admit I was aware of this, so I apologize for underestimating your intelligence. I have seen this little "rule" I listed "broken" so many times in thesis papers without consequence that I was well aware that its grammatical importance was negligible.

It must make sense now why the word "offense" was in quotation marks in my original post.

Yep. Seems I was careless there. I can admit when I'm wrong.

Fair do's.
