If you run the server from your home this is never going to work for you. Don't worry though, it probably does work fine for others outside your lan. Just put your name in a file called ssc_ignore.txt. If it doesn't exist create it in the brenbot directory.

The problem here is that you register yourself with the renguard server with you external ip while you connect to your server with your internal ip. Since these 2 are not the same Brenbot will think you are not running renguard.

~ is irc master. You won't get it unless you own that irc server.

I am going to suppose you already know something of IRC here and you are on irc.n00bstories.com. If you want your brenbot to auth itself, you first need to register that nick yourself. To do this take down brenbot. Use your brenbot's nick with "/nick <name>" then register it with something like "/msg nickserv register <pass> <email>". Then set that password and nick in the brenbot config. Take your own nick back and restart brenbot. It is now authed. Now it is registered you can put your brenbot in the op list of your channel with "/msg chanserv aop #yourchannel add <brenbotname>". Remember to this you need to register your channel first too so you will be master of that channel. To register a channel you have to be authed yourself. To register a channel type "/msg chanserv #yourchannel <password> <achanneldescription>". Check the server tab after each command to see nickserv and chanserv responses.

also handy commands: "/msg chanserv help" and "/msg nickserv help" check this too: http://www.renegadewiki.com/index.php?title=MIRC\_Tutorial ok iv alrely registered the chan and nick but still wont work also aop, re: renguadr working on the server with ssc_ignore.txt iv dont that but still dont work how would u set it up in the file is self?

eg like admin:

mod01 raptora
mod02 hell
mod03 and so one?

About renguard: names only. If you have more then one name, put one on every line.

like:
Raptor
Hell
and so on?

About irc: You have done something wrong. Do it again and watch the server tab closely as this is where the bots respond and give you info about what you are doing wrong.

Erase admin01 from the file completly. Those are examples. Just put your name raptora on the first line.
