The Associated Press wrote on Mon, 10 April 2006 02:21 KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia - A Malaysian man said he nearly fainted when he received a U.S. $218 trillion phone bill and was ordered to pay up within 10 days or face prosecution, a newspaper reported Monday.

Yahaya Wahab said he disconnected his late father's phone line in January after he died and settled the 84-ringgit (U.S. $23) bill, the New Straits Times reported.

But Telekom Malaysia later sent him a 806,400,000,000,000.01-ringgit (U.S. $218 trillion) bill for recent telephone calls along with orders to settle within 10 days or face legal proceedings, the newspaper reported.

It wasn't clear whether the bill was a mistake, or if Yahaya's father's phone line was used illegally after his death.

"If the company wants to seek legal action as mentioned in the letter, I'm ready to face it," the paper quoted Yahaya as saying. "In fact, I can't wait to face it," he said.

Yahaya, from northern Kedah state, received a notice from the company's debt-collection agency in early April, the paper said. Yahaya said he nearly fainted when he saw the new bill.

Government-linked Telekom Malaysia Bhd. is the country's largest telecommunications company.

A company official, who declined to be identified as she was not authorized to speak to the media, said Telekom Malaysia was aware of Yahaya's case and would address it. She did not provide further details.

That's priceless.

Just to put that into perspective, it would take you nearly 1,400,000 years to count to that number aloud (assuming you could hold a steady rate of saying 5 numbers per second).

Quote:That would pay for our current national debt 25 times over.

And if China ever called up that debt, America would be in alot of trouble.

It's not priceless. The U.S. government was able to put a price tag on it.

Well, he has about 8 more days to pay it. He better start saving up .
But seriously, this is retarded. Even if someone used his phone for 2 years straight, 24 hours a day at cost of 100$ per second, it would still not cost as much.
What the hell is wrong with people? April 1st was 2 weeks ago.
