Has this been a problem with anyone else? It will black out to my desktop, then when I try to log in again, it tells me I already am. It will fix itself after an hour or so, but I want to know if there is a way to prevent it.

He means when Ren crashes it says "login in use".

When your Ren crashes, your login session to Xwis stays as it didn't disconnect (properly). You need to wait until that session times out. It's easiest to simply take another nick and login with that.

One time, I logged in under my other nick to see my default just standing there. Weird.

XWIS takes a long time to time your account out. If renegade quit without telling XWIS it was exiting (if it crashed for example), XWIS will consider the user to be logged in for about half an hour or so, perhaps longer. It was a lot shorter with the old WOL. I would have expected the nickname to be kicked out of the server though, and just be sitting idle in XWIS.
