I still play Renegade every once in a while, not as much as I used to obviously... perhaps every other week, once or twice, under the name triarc51

I usually play 2 or 3 times a week, back in the days when westwood was still around I played about 6 hours a day, but those days have long since vanished due to college, various coding projects and not being as addicted to renegade as I used to be. It's still a great game, but I don't have the time to play as much as I used to now.

I'll probably start playing some multiplayer when I get the computer with Renegade back onto a good network. For now though, I have to stick with single-player.

I'll play occaisionally, but I'm more into Red Alert: A Path Beyond at the moment. I used to play every day for several hours, but now I've developed an interest in PHP and C++, and am learning them.

Actually, since I've essentially been kicked from my own clan, I'll probably play much less now and focus more on PHP and C++.

i dont think many people still play but if you go on jelly-server you will notice alot of newbi's.

i have alot of time on my hands so:

- 1) in the moring i get up and do my thing. check up on renegadeforums.com
 - 2) i tweek my bot (not code though)
 - 3) play on renegade-single player
 - 4) when i get annoyed at that, i play on internet.
 - 5) do something else for a cuple of hours.
 - 6) go on renegade internet.

7) code my bot
test it
9) play on internet
10 go bed.

The Renegade Community varies.

You have the people that come and go within a week or so.

Then you have the dorks that have been playing it since the start.

Those people are where the core of the game's community is.. really the only reason it's lasted as long as it has.

Only problem is, it's getting old and begs for new content

(And not just maps and crates! I'm talkin vehicles and weapons too! dang it!)

But yeah, it's not easy making a patch to deliver those things... still it would be kickass.

(And I don't know how you guys can even bear to play single player for a second, it's friggin terrible... Yuck.)

I've just about had enough of Renegade as a whole, it seems since it transferred over to XWIS it seemed to get more laggy, i can't get to any server without 250 ping. Although when i get a server lower than that, my fps suffers, so i'm laggy either way.

I've moved onto ZH really, only till C&C3 comes out.

What about Gamespy? Also, have you tried asking server owners or moderators about getting IPs to directly connect? From previous experience, I'm sure Crimson won't mind giving you the IP for her server.

Well, I was playing frequently again... but then my sister cooked the DSL modem by stacking a bunch of shit on top of it and leaving it on all night. My connection options right now are dial-up and wireless- neither of which is reliable or fast enough to play anything besides Starsiege. So no, I'm not playing Ren actively just now.

I play... once a week maybe, or every couple.

Cramming a few hours of Renegade can be a nice stress reliever. It's like a personal therapist, but much more fun.

To those of you playing this game night and day, 24/7, don't forget to eat and piss, and oh yeah, and try to keep some semblance of a social network (in real life). Meh, probably not possible; just remember to get out of your chair once every few hours.

Well, I definitely still play Renegade when I'm not busy doing something else (which is quite often). You'll probably find me playing at my clanserver.

I also mod Renegade, I make sounds for C&C Reborn.

I'm actually one of the Renegade oldies, I've been playing the game since the Renegade demo, which is about four and a half years ago.

I have a lot of the newer FPS games, and an Xbox360, but I often find myself coming back to C&C Renegade after playing a different game. Call me crazy, but I think Renegade is one of the most unique multiplayer experiences ever.

Still surprised no other game really pulled off a "c&c mode". CTF and DM get way too boring.
