It's ironic how everyone just knew the new Nintendo system would suck really hard. I even thought it would suck... until all of that new information was released and I learned much more about it. It's going to be more effective than the Xbox 360 and probably the Playstation 3.

That's not preordering. That's "We don't want you to get fucking shot waiting in like like that guy did waiting for the PS3. Here, this will be proof that you were x place in line."

Oh, and our mall doesn't open till 12. People are camping outside. My friend's dad is a manager at another store in the mall, so he's letting my friend and another guy in like, 5 minutes early to get a Wii.

I camped out and got mine at exactly 8:37AM, I was first in line but my debit card was locked so I had to wait for my step-father to get there and pay for it.

Any way, so far it doesn't disappoint. Got myself a second Wiimotes and I'll probably go get new games tomorrow (Zelda, Rayman).

I woke up at 10AM yesterday and got there at 4PM, was joined by two others at 5 and blah blah blah, camping out was awesome... Although the cold almost made me lose my legs. :<

Sad... Not cuz of the Wii gettin smashed, but the lifelessness of the people.

If you've got nothing better to do than to wait in line forever, buy a $300 or whatever Wii, and smash it, you should save your money and go buy a hooker.

Actually, the people from smashmy(whatever).com are geniuses. They buy warranties for their systems before they destroy them so they can get another one later, they did it in the Xbox360 video. People are essentially buying them all the next-gen consoles.

Are you sure the warranty covers throwing the system on the ground to purposely smash it?

In the full Xbox 360 video, the Best Buy salesperson said that with the warranty, they could go outside right away, break it and get another.

That Best Buy employee was a moron, our Service plans don't cover abuse and only Laptops and Cameras have accidental coverage.

Most of you (Best Buy employees) have no clue what "service plan" actually means, according to past experiences and launch day shit (supervisors WTF'ing at their definition it).

I can't think of any reason why a gaming console would have accidental coverage. Not only that, but they have video proof of it not being an accident...

I don't care what other people think. I know that I want one and that I want smash brothers brawl. No matter how much the console sucks, it's way better than any of the other next generation consoles, because they're exactly like PCs. They're completely useless if you already have a high-end PC, like me.

What? I'm saying is that all you people are falling for that console. The ads might look cool, but the console probably is 10 times worse. Now stop spending your time obsessing over some overpriced console, and use your life a little bit wiser.

Yeah. Sure. Am I not supposed to trust several of my well-trusted friends (that own it), even though they told me they are loving it? Why do you say it's 10 times worse? Saying that doesn't make you anymore sure than I am, most likely less. I do use my life quite wisely, thank you. You don't know what I do in my life, so you have no right to assume that.
