My flight to LA was completely uneventful. When I arrived, I took an uneventful taxi ride to the hotel, where I uneventfully checked in and got up to my room on the 9th floor of the hotel. We were instructed to call Predator on his cell phone when we arrived, but he wasn't answering.

I didn't know who to even look for, so I had to sit in the hotel, chatting on IRC, until finally HeXetic from PlanetCNC managed to find my room number and called. I went downstairs and hung out with some other community members, including Renardin, for an hour or so until dinner.

We took like 6 or 7 taxis to a Mexican restaurant for dinner, where I sat with Predator, HeXetic, some German guy I don't know, and DonCarlo from Strike Team/XWIS joined us a little late.

She was also my roommate. I hadn't gotten much sleep the night before, so when we got back to the hotel, I took a shower and went to sleep. Besides, we had to get up and meet in the lobby at 8:30am. (ugh)

We took many taxis to EALA for our fun-filled first day! We were warned ahead of time that we wouldn't be back to the hotel until after midnight. Our first stop was the EATS cafeteria where we had breakfast burritos and pancakes, stressing the poor cooks out I'm sure.

Here's a rather blurry shot of Renardin picking up his burrito.

After breakfast, we gathered in a meeting room for several hours of informative presentations and demonstrations, most of which I can't tell you about for a few weeks. In this picture, you can see two CNC webmasters on the left. The rest of the standing members were various developers and managers on the team. You can also see the backs of our C&C3 Community Summit T-Shirts in GDI and Nod. The fronts just had the corresponding logo which I'm sure you'll see in another picture eventually.

When you enter the main entrance, there's a waiting area where you can play EA's games on several consoles.

This is a picture of the EA Experience store. Here, we got to buy PC games for $10 and console games for $20. I picked up a copy of TFD and Battlefield 2142 for Blazer for a grand total with tax of $21.56.

The employees also have an amazing break room which incites much jealousy in all who behold it.

Thus ends part 1 of my adventure. The next installment will feature all the hotness that is our presentation by Dragon Dronet and all the cool movie props he brought with him and more.

Haha! Nice picture of me there .

Anyway, the burritos rocked! I didn't hear of them before... good stuff for breakfast, definitely.

I've also bought two games on EA store. People could buy a pack with Generals, Zero Hour, BfME 1 and other 2 games for 10 dollars + taxes. There was also a Wii being sold there, but I couldn't buy it because it was exclusive to the employees .

Anyway, it was a pleasure to meet you and everyone else there. The group was great and we had a lot of fun.

Thanks, Renardin. I have to prepare for my phone meeting which is in about 3 hours, and I have a company Christmas party tonight, but I hope to get Part 2 up today. My images are high-res JPGs that I have to resize and convert to PNGs, which is a pain. Plus I have to make sure the images don't contain any of the things we dare not speak about.

If I hear about anyone having detailed coverage like I prepared, I'll pass the link along, but so far there has only been brief postings. Many of the webmasters will probably wait until after the "embargo" has passed to post full, detailed coverage.

Here's a picture of Crimsons new video card after I installed it for her. She is fortunate that her motherboard has a PCI-E slot as well as AGP (her old card was an AGP Ti4800SE). I also had to go out and buy her a new power supply, because the video card requires a dedicated 6pin power connection that her existing one didn't have. Not a bad deal at all for a $300 512MB PCI-Express card - thanks EA!

Just answer these two questions:

- Anything (non-specific) good for the community?
- Will you be able to reveal the it/information/what you've got anytime soon?

1) We will need the help and support of the entire community to make our wildest dreams come to fruition. Having the support of everyone in the community, including and especially those who have had beef with me or us in the past, will go a long way to making sure the BHS is able to continue to fulfill our #1 goal and mission statement: Keeping Renegade alive.

2) There IS hope. EA is willing to work with us within certain guidelines to get what we want. And as most of you know, BHS is used to making things work with what we're given.

3) Though there is a negative impression of XWIS in the community, you guys have to realize and accept that they aren't going anywhere. I don't see how any solution would be able to promise 100% uptime.

On another note, since I have your attention, the BI guys were kind enough to migrate the BlackHand Studios' "Corporate" site to their CMS (Content Management System). Along with that, I had hoped to finish up the BHS/BI partnership and finally assemble the BHS-VPC, but I ended up spending more time wrapping up things from the Community Summit and preparing for my phone meeting. Maybe I'll find time this weekend, or maybe it will have to wait until after Christmas when I have another week off work. We'll see...

Peace, unity, brotherhood. These are things that we need to attain. I never knew the words of Kane would predict the future of the Renegade community. I am at disposal for any community related task. Without this community I wouldnt have started Apocalypse Rising. Thanks for staying here, and heres to many years of the community to come. *raises glass*

Lets just see if any of our three mods make it into the Moddb finals. Its going to be close.

It would help a lot when they decide to drop the "Invalid Serial" bullshit, which has made it impossible for a lot of people to play the game without using direct connect, even though we DID pay for our serials like anyone else did.

But anyway, I hope this will turn into something good.

Well, I'd better save it quickly then.

You can get the disc when you pre-order at some websites / stores. More info is available on the C&C3 forums sticky (currently down, it seems):

They do seem to be over-acting, but weren't all of the C&C cutscenes like that? Well, not ALL, but at least the ones in Tiberian Sun and Red Alert 2.

Well, it looks like the "faction that they won't call the Scrin" builds bases just like GDI and Nod and will somehow be balanced with the rest of the factions. That's retarded, if that is true, because they seem to have highly advanced technology, and if they were the ones who planted the Tiberium, it wouldn't make any sense.

They better not have those glowing team colour markers on all the stuff in the single player like they did in generals, the units look so much better without them.

The visitors come to Earth for the Tiberium, they didn't plant it.

Maybe the fact that BHS/Crimson do not represent this community fully and it would be better for the community to work together as a whole rather than continue the endless renedrama that it seems to be most of the time.

Good job sticking to the mission statement though, lol.

No, stuff did happen... it's just more like now I know what needs to be done in order to get where we want to go. Unfortunately I'm not allowed to just tell everyone what that is because EA just looooves to be secretive. I can partly understand why it has to be that way, though.
