Ok I am trying to make this fuckin old computer (built in 1996) it turns on but I need a keyboard because it gives me shit about how it dosent have a keyboard... Only, its got a keyboard port... its not PS/2... or USB? It has lines almost in the hook thing? It was made before they had PS/2 and USB so what is it???

I can mabe get a picture later but my sister wont let me use her camera right now.

The hard drive isent even SETA!

5 pin DIN, we come across loads of those in music engineering, Sometimes called MIDI.

I'm sure there has to be a male to female DIN/USB somewhere.

I have one litterally sitting behind me on the floor.  Its been there for 2 weeks.  My cat was attacking it...  I think its the same atleast.  I needed it for the mouse on my old windows 95 computer.

Last time I was in a computer store I saw one.  Not some big franchised store they won't have them.  But if you go to a small little computer shop I can almost guarantee they will have one.

yeah i remember a guy walked into microcenter looking for one of those keyboard jacks, couldn't find one. so i went to a local computer store, had everything an old pc can ask for.

My other Windows 98 pc (Absolutely wrecked) Didn't like the keyboard it came with after so meny years..

I put my Logitech Keyboard in and it worked.

If you really cant find a keyboard or adapter, get a usb card. They plug into a pci slot, and then you have usb (for a keyboard and/or mouse).

Is that a "Rice Krispie" or a "Coco-pop" mouse, perhaps a "Cornflake" mouse.

That type of mouse would be eaten by the time it got to the keyboard.

I believe you mean SERIAL
