In going through your day-to-day lives, you will encounter people you have a real sympatico with, and people you will just never see eye-to-eye with no matter what. One example is one of the executives at work and my boss... their personality types are ones to butt heads constantly. They can't understand the way each other thinks or acts at all.

When I started my job, my boss made me take this test so he would understand me as a person better and faster than he could just by observation.

<http://www.humanmetrics.com/cgi-win/JTypes1.htm>

Take this test and post your result. It comes in 4 letters, and each letter has a percentage behind it so you can identify if you are "weak" in one letter where you could swing either way.

Answer the questions honestly and with a lot of thought. There are no wrong answers. This test is so accurate that if you get really knowledgable on what each letter means and what combinations of letters mean, you can identify behaviors and words as "classic  behavior". I won't reveal my letters until a few of you have taken the test. I am especially curious to see the results for people I communicate with on a day-to-day basis.

Bear in mind that if you form a cross, as in up, down, left, right.

We should aim to be close to the middle of the axis as opposed to out on one side. The "normal,balanced person" would demonstrate a diamond shape, with sides of equal length, if the four points were connected as opposed to a quadrilateral.

I cant help it though, im extroverted lol.

Scroll down beyond the page and see the results that are applied to other theories.

Your Risk Type Profile

Type	Type description	Type expression %

Secondary Type(s)	Adventurer	32%

I had my wife and kids read what it says about myself. We all agree.

I reckon you will see a few ex-soldiers coming into the "Adventurer" bracket. See who joins me.

The Champion Idealists are abstract in thought and speech, cooperative in accomplishing their aims, and informative and expressive when relating with others. For Champions, nothing occurs which does not have some deep ethical significance, and this, coupled with their uncanny sense of the motivations of others, gives them a talent for seeing life as an exciting drama, pregnant with possibilities for both good and evil. The next step of this is to see how you interact with others in a general way.

<http://www.typellogic.com/intj.html>

If you scroll to the bottom, you can see the "type relationships". An INTJ like me will be a contrast with an ENTP. The definition of a "contrast" relationship is "point and counterpoint on each function". (You can see all the type relationships here: <http://www.typellogic.com/pairs.html>)

If you have someone you just can't get along with take this test, you just might find that they are your "contrast" or "anima", or maybe an "enigma" if you are the type who doesn't like people whose thought processes you can't understand.

Yeah!!!!!! So beware all the rest of you, Im ENTJ also ENTJs are decisive. They see what needs to be done, and frequently assign roles to their fellows. Few other types can equal their ability to remain resolute in conflict, sending the valiant (and often leading the charge) into the mouth of hell. When challenged, the ENTJ may by reflex become argumentative. Alternatively (s)he may unleash an icy gaze that serves notice: the ENTJ is not one to be trifled with.

So true

That sounds a ton like me now. I didn't read the other description of my type. I'd be really interested now to see what Aircraftkiller and Jadames are. This may sound dumb and you guys would probably -rep me if you could but they've both kinda felt... like a mentor to me. If you are familiar with Scrubs then maybe you could see the JD Cox dynamic. Maybe they are Pedagogal to my ENFJ or something. That would make them INTPs and I think there are some matches.

Precise about their descriptions, INTPs will often correct others (or be sorely tempted to) if the shade of meaning is a bit off. While annoying to the less concise, this fine discrimination ability gives INTPs so inclined a natural advantage as, for example, grammarians and linguists.

INTPs and Logic -- One of the tipoffs that a person is an INTP is her obsession with logical correctness. Errors are not often due to poor logic -- apparent faux pas in reasoning are usually a result of overlooking details or of incorrect context.

Aircraftkiller Definatly lol

SKIN VS TEXTURE

It also says they may be really good at and interested in programming and math and Jadame is awesome at programming.

Uh yeah... I'll quit now lol.
